Joy

Introducing Claremont Preparatory School, where students are encouraged to take on intellectual challenges and embrace learning as a joyful and lifelong endeavor.

Claremont Prep is the first independent, ongoing school to open in Manhattan in 50 years.

Located in the heart of Lower Manhattan, financial capital of the world and New York's fastest growing residential neighborhood, we offer a superior educational program to 1000 children ages 5 through 14 in a state-of-the-art facility. We are committed to providing our students with a strong foundation in academics, the arts and athletics and to preparing them to meet the challenges of high school, college and the global community.

Enrollment for September 2005 begins Tuesday, September 7, 2004.

WHO KNEW?

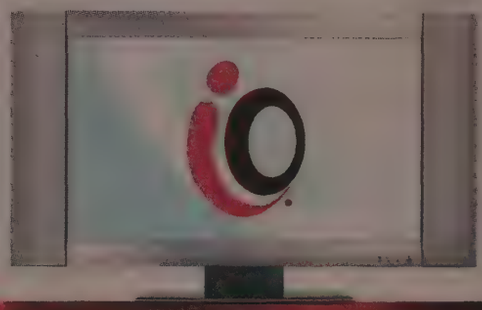

THE NEW BRIDGEHAMPTON KMART, READY FOR SUMMER

kmart

Summer isn't always sunshine and blue skies. So don't forget to order iO digital cable service from Cablevision for the summer months. With hundreds of movies and shows on demand, iO is like having a video store right in your home. And unlike satellite, there's no annual contract or expensive equipment to buy. Want to have a great summer? You don't need to worry about a thing. You just need iO.

Get over 140 channels* for $39.90 a month for a year.

iO Digital Cable Service from Cablevision 1.866.964.4688 www.iO.tv/summer

New subscribers only. Offer expires June, 30, 2004, and applies to standard aerial installation on up to three TV sets in wired, serviceable areas where iO is available. *As included in the Family Cable package plus iO package. Certain channels not available in all areas. The Family Cable package plus iO package will be billed at their regular rate as of the thirteenth month. A digital cable box is required (at an additional charge) for each television set to receive digital services. Transaction fees may apply to changes in service. Depending on where you live, some or all of your service and equipment rates, plus certain additional charges, may be subject to state and local fees of 0.5% and an FCC user fee of 5¢, which will be added to your monthly bill. Offer available to accounts in good standing. Commercial accounts excluded. Other restrictions may apply. iO not available in all areas. Important Customer Information: The programs, packages, services, number of channels, content, format, rates and other aspects of Cablevision's service are its current offerings and are subject to change or discontinuance at any time in accordance with applicable law.

The most beautiful homes in Manhattan, The Hamptons, and Palm Beach have one thing in common. Us.

Ellen Bitton, President

And because we do one thing, and one thing only, we do it very well. In fact, when it comes to securing mortgages, people say we're the best. We'll get you the perfect mortgage. You may only need us once or twice in a lifetime. But when you do, we'll be there. Call us. You'll see. There's a lot more to mortgages than just numbers.

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S. and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is geniunely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling -- and their parents, too!

There is only one solution: Avantair

FRACTIONAL AIRCRAFT OWNERSHIP

Affordable Private Aircraft Travel

Avantair is the exclusive fractional provider of the distinctive and highly acclaimed Piaggio Avanti P-180. With its unique program, Avantair has made the cost of private aircraft ownership surprisingly affordable.

With a fleet of new Avanti's at your disposal 24 hours a day, you're never restricted by airline travel schedules. You're free to travel when you need to, on short notice, unencumbered. Avantair gets you there on your time, on your terms and in your style. At the outset, Avantair may appear similar to other fractional providers. A closer look, however, will demonstrate an aircraft unrivaled in the industry with a unique program that emphasizes an unmatched commitment to safety, security and customer service, with no hourly flight fees, a fractional first!

So how does Avantair keep its pricing lower than competitors? Bolstered by the Avanti's operational cost per mile which is the lowest of any of its jet peers, Avantair also exclusively operates one type of aircraft, allowing all employees to be experts in all its aspects, resulting in the highest level of professionalism in this aircraft. Further, we stock all frequently needed service items, reducing downtime, meaning greater availability for our owners!

Roomier, Faster, and More Luxurious

The P-180 offers all of the amenities of a mid-size jet for much less than the price of a light jet. The unique shape and design of the Avanti provides an ultra-spacious stand-up cabin, found only in much more costly mid-size jets. Along with two crew members, it seats up to seven passengers in a cabin with roomy swivel leather seats, a full stand-up restroom and executive workstations. But the Avanti's remarkable comfort extends well beyond cabin volume. Italian leather seating and sound dampening interior. In flight the Avanti's rear mounted props and turbulence cushioning forward wing make it whisper quiet and vibration free. Add it all together and you get to your destination refreshed and rested, not cramped and fatigued. Complete with weather, traffic and terrain avoidance radar, and full EFIS (electronic flight information system) cockpit, the Avanti has some of the most advanced technological systems available on any aircraft, commercial or corporate.

Part Of Southampton's Heritage Is Auctioned Off At Sotheby's

By Dan Rattiner

A self portrait of the painter William Merritt Chase was auctioned off at Sotheby's last Wednesday morning. Measuring just 24 inches high and 20 inches wide, appraisers at Sotheby's estimated it would fetch between $80,000 and $120,000 when the time came.

This painting is very important to Southampton. The artist did his best work in Shinnecock during the 20 year period from 1880 to 1900, and by many measures, it was the best painting going on in America during that time.

"His work is among the most splendidly beautiful and most perfect landscapes ever painted in America," one critic said.

William Merritt Chase also taught painting here during this period. And so after he died, in 1916, his students got together in Manhattan and found one of the many self portraits he had painted during his final years. And they gave it to the Rogers Memorial Library. Whenever people went to the library in Southampton, there on the wall was one of the Town's most important citizens.

Now, a century later, the library needed funds. The nearby Parrish Art Museum board offered the Library $100,000 cash for it, but the Library wanted to take its chances. The art auction market is white hot just now. They turned the offer down.

It seemed to me that if the Town was going to lose part of its heritage, the least I could do would be to go to Sotheby's in Manhattan and watch it go. Just perhaps, whoever bought it might give it back to the town. Maybe there would be a white knight.

We close Dan's Papers on Tuesday night, staying often far into the night, and I have to be there. The painting, I learned, would be at auction as part of a group of 210 American Paintings, drawings and sculptures at Sotheby's on Wednesday, May 19 beginning at 10:15 in the morning. The Chase painting would be the tenth piece auctioned. Although the auction would go on all day, the Chase would go under the gavel probably just fifteen minutes after the auction began.

"Come early," a woman at Sotheby's told me over the phone. "If you want to get a seat."

I did the math. Tuesday night, probably until 2 a.m., I'd be at the paper in Bridgehampton. To get to the auction at York and 71st Street by 9:30 am Wednesday, I'd have to catch the Hampton Jitney bus from Bridgehampton at 6:45 am. That meant getting up at 5:30 am at my home in East Hampton. I'd get maybe three and a half hours sleep. Well, hell, I've pulled all nighters before.

I usually go into New York and back with my dog. On the Jitney, he sleeps in a zippered carrying case. He also goes to work with me. I wondered if he could pull an all nighter, but then thought that's a ridiculous question. He sleeps whenever he wants to. No problem. Unless, Sotheby's won't let a little dog in.

I got to the front of the modern Sotheby's auction house building at about 9:45 a.m., having walked over from the bus stop on Third Avenue with the dog on a leash. Now, just to be sure, I put him back in his zippered case, hoisted him over my shoulder, and walked smoothly by the doormen and security guards at the glass doors of the establishment and went inside.

The auction was on the seventh floor. Elevator off to the right. I wasn't going to bid on anything, but I figured if anybody stopped me I'd try to look important and say with a certain urgency "I'm here for the art auction," as in "You wouldn't want to stop me because of a dog, would you?"

But nobody stopped me.

If you've never been to Sotheby's auction house before, I should take a few minutes here and describe it to you. It is not some musty old English mansion, which is what you might think. It is a modern facility with large display rooms and lots of glass and polished mahogany panels, and it looks like nothing so much as the Museum of Modern Art or — and this is a stretch, perhaps — the United Nations Secretariat Building.

The seventh floor auction room is as big as a good-sized theatre, with about 200 seats facing a raised dais where the auctioneer stands. Off to one side is a flat panel TV screen bigger than any I have ever seen outside of Times Square, on which, before the auction started, you could see, in a vertical row, the notations USD, EUR, UK, SWI, JPN; the symbols for the major currencies of the world. As the bidding would proceed, these totals would automatically change in lockstep with one another, so you could see instantly how much the bids were for in pounds, yen, euros, Swiss francs or dollars. There it was.

The self portrait, sold at auction

Some of the theatre seats had cards with the word RESERVED on them, others had telephones on them. There was, also, off to one side, a long table and chairs in what looked like an extended jury box. At this table would soon sit, in a single row, more than a dozen Sotheby's employees, some of them manning a phone, some of them manning two phones, taking bids from those not in attendance. It was a very intimidating place.

Around fifty people had arrived by 10 a.m., and they were talking softly. Some of them, mostly women, came over to pet the dog and make cooing sounds at him. But when one of them said "I've never seen a dog at Sotheby's before," I indicated that I'd like to make him more inconspicuous. I put him on the floor.

My girlfriend, who lives in Manhattan, arrived around five after ten. I'd saved her a seat. By fourteen after ten, the place was packed. Almost every seat was filled. There was a standing room crowd of about 100 in the back, and the employees were at the telephones. The noise level was now near to a roar. And then, the auctioneer, Bill Stahl, appeared and all sound stopped. He was about to begin.

"We now offer for competition a group of American paintings, drawings and sculptures. The Sotheby's commission is 20% up to $100,000 and 15% above $100,000. Your bid does not include the commission or the sales tax that must be paid if the painting is to be shipped to a buyer in any of the states where Sotheby's is authorized to collect sales tax. This is at 8 1/2 %. The paintings number 7, 10, 12, 18, 23, 54, 55 and 117 in the morning session are exempt of sales tax if sold in the State of New York. There is an interested party for 87, and 80 and 82 are withdrawn. We will now begin the bidding."

A Hundred Billion Come Up Out Of The Ground Here Next Week

By Dan Rattiner

Sometime in the next three weeks, a wealthy New Yorker who has just paid $2 million for an acre in East Hampton is going to call up Town Hall to complain about what is going on on his property.

"There are hundreds of thousands of them. Millions of them. Huge beetles that have come up from under the ground. They are all over the place. What kind of town are you running here? I paid a whole lot of money for this acre and that includes the oil and mineral rights and everything else below ground too. I want these things OUT."

The request will be put into an Out basket. A week later it will be moved to another Out basket. A week after that, all the beetles will have turned into dragonfly-size flying insects, will have mated noisily and will have died. They will not be heard from again for 17 years.

The man will call back the town. "Thank you," he will say.

The phenomenon of the cicadas is taking place through much of the Northeast. They will be burrowing their way up through the earth where they have been in hibernation for the past 17 years on Long Island from Manhattan to Montauk, and in Connecticut, in Central Park and in Ohio, in North Carolina, in New Jersey and in southwest Pennsylvania. The total number of them in just this limited area is expected to be about a hundred billion —

BALLPLAYER ROSS GLOAD HITS TWO HOME RUNS

By Dan Rattiner

Ross Gload, the former East Hampton High School baseball star and current resident of Springs, who is now playing for the Chicago White Sox, whacked his first home run of this season last Monday in a game against the Cleveland Indians. Two days later, he hit another one.

The first one came in the bottom of the eighth inning. Gload came in to pinch hit for right fielder Magglio Ordonez and, facing Rick White, smacked the second pitch into the right field bleachers. There was nobody on, and it was in a losing cause. Cleveland was ahead 7 to 1 at the time. The final score was 7 to 2, with Gload in left field for the ninth.

The second home run he hit was in his next appearance, in another game against Cleveland. With a runner on, he hit a liner off the right field foul pole and into the seats. Chicago won that time.

Gload, after graduating high school, has played in the minor leagues for a few years, with occasional forays into major league clubs for brief spells. Last season, he played for the AAA team in Charlotte, which is the top minor league team in the White Sox firmament, but then during spring training in Florida, he was selected for the White Sox team roster for the first time. He's been used sparingly, as a pinch hitter or a replacement off the bench in the late innings. In one of his first at bats, against the Yankee closer Mariano Rivera, he was put in as a pinch hitter in the ninth inning and lashed a single to right. Few people do more than strike about fifteen times the population of humans on the whole earth — and after they burrow to the surface, they will climb up into trees, poles, bushes and the occasional pant leg and begin to make a monumental mating racket by stroking the hard ribbed casings of their shells with their legs. They will stroke these casings back and forth, back and forth like a marimba, and other males will arrive and assemble in groups to make even more of a racket, and the females will arrive too and then the cicadas will all molt — take off their hard beetle suits — and mate. After they mate, the males will fly around for awhile and die, while the female will find the branches at the tips of tree limbs, saw little holes in the wood with this tiny saw they have under their thoraxes and deposit their larvae. Then they, too, will fly around and die.

Soon the larvae will hatch into what are called nymphs, the nymphs will drop to the ground and then they will burrow down into the ground to stay for the next seventeen years.

From a human perspective, we will have a whole lot of shell casings left around. One hundred billion to crunch under your feet. And there will be the sound of the mating call, which for some reason arrives in our ears as a kind of hissing sound, as if there were a small jet engine left on, somewhere nearby.

Otherwise cicadas are harmless. You might also find yourself walking through some sort of mist as you walk under a tree. That's urine mist. Also harmless.

Don't worry. It's over in three weeks. And that's about it from the human perspective.

But there still remain a lot of questions. Why, for instance, do the cicadas spend 17 years burrowing around underground? It's fair to ask this. Can't they mate underground? It could be done if you think about it. A male would just have to burrow himself a bigger burrow, then begin making the noise to attract the female.

As I mentioned, the noise a cicada makes attracts not only a female, but it attracts herds of other males who also begin making the noise. Now if they did this underground — but they DON'T do it underground. They wait 17 years and then, all at once, burrow UP toward the surface to find this romantic location — I guess it is to them — where they can make lots of noise, carry on, get it on, and knock themselves out.

You know what comes to mind? Happy Hour, 4-6. Women admitted free. That's what.

So here we are, the surface of the earth, from the perspective of some beetles scrambling around in the dirt, the equivalent of Studio 54 or the Electric Circus, to name a few that were around 17 years ago.

I also wonder what the cicadas say to one another for seventeen years underground. Oh, I need a man. Just sixteen years and four months to go, honey.

I hate this place. It's so DIRTY.

And seventeen years for three weeks of carrying on? Next time you think your life is tough, think of these cicadas, and the hand dealt to them. It'll cheer you up.

Seventeen years ago was 1987. There were no cell phones. No Tivo. Ronald Reagan was President. The Soviet Union had 8,000 missiles pointed at Washington. The Americans had 8,000 missiles pointed at Moscow.

Be kind to your cicadas. They're coming soon. And soon after that they'll be gone, down little holes in the ground, leaving behind just a hiss of misty urine. Which somebody ought to figure out how to bottle and sell as an aphrodisiac.

It's great to be alive.

out against Rivera, probably the greatest relief pitcher in the game today.

At the present time, Gload is batting .292. And though the White Sox have not been a contender in recent years, they are currently in second place in the western division of the American League just one game behind the leader, the Minnesota Twins. Whether any of this can be attributed to the ascendancy of Ross is unknown, but the coach is now starting him almost every day, letting him give a breather to the left, center or right fielder of the team, or even the first baseman, a position at which he also excels.

In other baseball news, something needs to be said about the rivalry between the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees at this juncture. The Yanks, with all the talent in the world, began the new season as flat as a pancake. They were beaten six out of seven times by the Red Sox early on, and they floundered in last place in the eastern division of the American League while the Red Sox soared to first place. The manager, Joe Torre, was getting nervous about his job. Owner George Steinbrenner, who can be a mean and nasty man towards his employees, was recently interviewed in a newspaper — he was in tears.

In the last 25 games, however, things have turned around. The Yankees began winning and climbing up in the standings, and a week ago roared passed the Red Sox into first place. Where they belong.

Friends of mine who attend Red Sox games at Fenway Park tell me that the Red Sox, at the start of the season, were convinced that this would be the year they would break "the curse," that matter involving Babe Ruth eighty years ago that has resulted in their not winning a world series since 1918. Their stellar performance this year, people said, was proof of it, and they had the Yankees number. Now, they tell me, even though the Yanks have not returned to Fenway to play another series, Red Sox fans frequently stand up in the stands during some boring moment in a game against another team and for no reason yell "——the Yankees!" And everybody cheers. But then, they have been doing that since the season began this year.

You deserve a vacation from sleepless nights!

I DIDN'T THINK DOGS WERE ALLOWED AT THE BEACH

New Rules

Between 12 And 1, It's People Off The Beach So The Dogs Can Use It

By Dan Rattiner

During this winter, both East and Southampton Towns have been wrestling with the problem of what access dogs should have to the beaches. The Hamptons is a big dog community, and lots of people stepped forward to speak up for them. Some headway was made.

The objections to allowing dogs on the beach, of course, are that dogs make their "claim" to beaches in the same way they make claim to anything, by peeing on it. Nobody wants somebody's dog to come over, and after getting a few pats, make a claim on a beach chair. Or pooping nearby. And, of course, most dogs have this food rule taught to them for generations by humans — if it hits the floor it's yours. This can really piss people off when they are having a picnic on the blanket next to yours.

On the other hand, dogs are on the planet just like we are, and there is little doubt they love the beach, sprinting this way and that when they get there. Some of the water breeds dive into the ocean to try to catch fish. (Some succeed.) Some of the tennis breeds chase down and return tennis balls thrown by their owners. Quite a few people have one of the Frisbee catching breeds. Everybody has a good time.

...in the last five years, what dog has ever seen what a crowded beach is like between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. during the summertime?

There is also the difference between the summer and the winter. In the summer, beachgoers tend to congregate near life guard stands, clumped together in groups. But beyond that down the beach there is generally nothing — just open sands with beachcombers and occasional joggers. No reason not to allow dogs there. In the wintertime, people generally don't go to the beach at all.

Until now, East and Southampton, who together make the laws for almost all of the forty five miles of beach from Montauk to Eastport, have taken different approaches to the situation. In East Hampton, the law until now has been that dogs can run free anywhere on the

Fade To Black

Play With Electricity On An Offshore Island And Get A Shock

By Dan Rattiner

Everybody knows that the more people come out to the Hamptons in the summertime, the more electrical power we need. This year the increase will be by a factor of four — for every light bulb turned on in January, there will be four light bulbs turned on in July. It makes quite a display. From outer space, anyway.

But where does this power come from? Obviously, we do not have any refineries anywhere. Without waterfalls, we don't have hydroelectric power. And nobody yet has found coal or oil to take out of the ground. And obviously the summer people aren't bringing power out, in the back of their SUVs in buckets.

Frankly, there are only two ways we can get electricity here. The more expensive one involves bringing oil in from foreign lands aboard tankers, to fire up power plants along the Long Island shore. The nearest one is in Port Jefferson. There are others further west.

The cheaper way is with cables. The oil and coal will already have been converted to power somewhere upstate, and then be brought here by underground or underwater cables. Which means that we need to get cooperation from Connecticut.

Five years ago, Connecticut approved high powered cables to run through that state and then go underwater across Long Island Sound to come ashore at Shoreham. Connecticut already had cables coming in from upstate New York and upper New England, but the rationale for them was that, on a day to day basis, if need be, Long Island would backwash power on the cable to stabilize the needs of

HAMPTON STUNT PILOT DIES WHILE PERFORMING

By Robin F. Smith

On April 30, internationally known aerobatic pilot Ian Groom, familiar to East End vacationers who watched his breathtaking stunts in the skies over our local beaches, was killed in a plane crash off the coast of Fort Lauderdale, Florida. It was his 58th birthday.

Grooms, practicing for his participation in the McDonalds Air & Sea Show, was maneuvering his way through a flat spin, an awesome stunt in which a plane seems to spiral out of control only to level at the last moment. This time, however, the respected and experienced pilot was unable to regain control of his aircraft, a Russian-built, single seat Sukhoi, and fifteen minutes into his routine, he plunged into the ocean. He is survived by his wife and 9-year-old son.

Grooms was a South African native but became a US citizen in 1995. He had attended both college and graduate school in the US, and then lived all over this country and in Europe, working as an investment banker. But at age 39, he gave up life in the office for a life in the sky, and rose quickly to fame in the world of air aerobic competitions. Two years ago, he set a world record for doing 57 corkscrews in 26 seconds, and it was thought that he was intending to beat that the weekend he crashed; he died while performing his signature move.

Groom lived in East Hampton for several summers, and used East Hampton airport as home base for his stunt plane. He gave lessons and demonstrations, and had a reputation for being an excellent pilot. He had performed in air shows around the world for 20 years.

During the past few years, Groom had cut back on his own performances, devoting time instead to training pilots for the Homeland Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement. His expertise was so respected that he was called upon, after September 11th, to work with pilots who are sometimes involved in dangerous air chases. He was happy to help, replying when asked, that he and his family were living the "American Dream," and that he was glad to give back to this country.

Saving The Sign

They Won't Give Up The Sag Harbor Cinema Sign Without A Fight

By Emily J Weitz

We all know the sign. It has hung on the face of the Sag Harbor movie theater since the 1930s, and has become an icon of the town. Any movie marquee adds flavor to a town, but this one was particularly special. It was classy and quaint at once, its bright red neon art deco lettering contrasting against the white paint behind it. It was simple, it was sufficient, and it became a part of the charming character of Sag Harbor. And now, like so many of our towns' worn, weathered puzzle pieces of history, it has been taken down and replaced.

Sag Harbor has a lot of character, and it would be unfair to say that it will lose its essence without this sign. It won't. It would, however, be the loss of a symbol that represents the feeling you get walking down the street in Sag Harbor. It's not easy to capture it in words. That delicate mingling of antiquity and hipness, of quaintness and luxury, of artsy and real. That's Sag Harbor to me, and it sounds silly to say that those adjectives, that delicate balance, could have been summed up by a simple sign. But it was.

Of course, there are practical reasons why the sign needed to be replaced. The fact that it is so old adds to its emotional significance, but it also contributes to its decay. The sign could become a hazard. Mayor Ed Deyermond said pragmatically that "It was lucky the thing didn't fall down on top of somebody..."

Brenda Siemer, Charles Shawcroft and the letter B.

So, while the owner of the theatre does need to deal with the potential hazards of a worn neon sign, it doesn't necessarily have to be sawed in half and disposed of. This was apparently the fate that Sagaponack resident Brenda Siemer rescued the sign from, on Monday, May 10, as it headed for a dumpster. Ms. Siemer whisked the sign away to the Sag Harbor Whaling Museum, where it was kept until a few days later when it was moved to another protected location on the Long Wharf. Ms. Siemer has undertaken this as her mission, and even though she was threatened with arrest for larceny, I want to thank her for doing so.

It's funny how much things can come to hold meaning. But the thought of this sign possibly in a dumpster gives me the same feeling of sad nostalgia as an abandoned ferris wheel or a worn stuffed teddy bear lying on the rainy pavement. Things that were once symbols full of meaning and joy cast beaches in the off-season, but during the summer, can only be on beaches with lifeguards (called protected beaches) after 6 p.m. and before 10 a.m. And even then, are supposed to be on leashes in a 300 foot zone at the end of any paved road dead ending at the beach. At beaches far from civilization, it's legal to have a loose dog on the beach anytime.

Southampton took a much more Draconian view. Dogs were banned from all beaches anywhere, at any time, except for two beaches, Tiana Beach and Ponquogue Beach in Hampton Bays, and even there, they are allowed only in the wintertime. Many dog owners made it their business to learn the location of the border between Southampton and East Hampton, which is the white line that goes down the center of Town Line Road, separating Sagaponack from Wainscott.

I won't bore you with the backing and forthing of the various people speaking about how they think these laws ought to be changed, except to report that at one hearing, an attorney representing some condominium owners in Napeague said "I've asked and pleaded, please don't make me beg." But here are the results.

In Southampton Town, the new law is that dogs will be permitted at any time on any beach in town between September and May, but during the summertime, will be restricted from using bay and ocean beaches at town and trustee access roads except after 6 p.m. and before 9 a.m.

In East Hampton, an attempt to expand the leash-your-dog zone from 300 feet to 600 feet during the summertime from the end of any paved road, failed. Another attempt to have the word "paved" removed so it would also apply to the ends of dirt roads also failed.

Of course, people are expected to clean up after their dogs. And those little plastic bag dispensers are now being installed at most beaches in the area.

"There is huge sentiment for dogs in this town," Bill Taylor, the town waterways manager supervisor said at one meeting.

Other rules for dogs apply at State and County Parks that are also in East Hampton and Southampton Village. These are separate from the town, but together, account for only about 20% of all the beaches here.

Woof.

Next winter, I'm thinking of spearheading a drive to have the law changed yet again, to allow beach access for dogs in the summertime at protected town beaches during the daytime. Consider — in the last five years, what dog has ever seen what a crowded beach is like between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. during the summertime? None, is the answer.

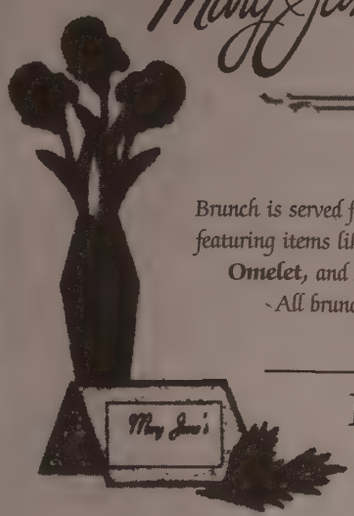

My plan is that beginning at 9 a.m., all dogs have to be off the beach so the people can use it. At noon, however, when the lifeguards go to lunch, everybody should have to get off the beaches so the dogs could use it. An hour later, at 1 p.m., with lunch over for the lifeguards, the dogs leave and the people return. At 6, people are once again banned from the beach and the dogs return.

The dogs clean up the mess made by the people. The people clean up the mess made by the dogs. That's fair.

It could happen.

The Story Of The Man Who Sells Flowers By The Side Of The Road

By Christian McLean

You won't find his name in the ledgers of Ellis Island, but his tale is the same as many immigrants who passed through there; arriving with little, seeking work, trying to survive in a new world. You may remember the stories from your childhood, accounts of men and women who traveled from remote parts of Europe and Asia in pursuit of a better life for their families. You may have even called them "grandma" or "grandpa." Well, the chronicles of Ellis Island have long since become a part of history, but the immigrant story on this island continues.

Like the immigrants of the nineteenth century, Ozcan Ayyildiz came to make a better life. He came to escape a world where cultural tradition impinged on his personal goals. As a partner in Mogas, the family-run petroleum delivery company, Ozcan Ayyildiz led a comfortable life. "In Turkey I had everything: car, house," Ayyildiz said, when I met up with him on the roadside of Route 27, last Saturday. Ozcan left Turkey with his wife and young daughter bound for America, not as a desperate man looking only for fortune, but an honorable man who believed the personal freedom available to him in America was worth leaving a successful business, his homeland and all that he had known for a life of hard work on foreign soil, selling flowers on the side of the road.

> "I have a business...I have an accountant, I pay taxes, I'm happy. It's my own business, if they buy, they buy."

As Ozcan recounted his story, a pick-up truck stopped and a man with a Marlboro clenched between his lips hopped out to buy a few flowers for his girlfriend. Ozcan excused himself for a moment and greeted the man with a genuine smile. He began to explain the prices: $9.99 for six roses, $15 for nine, $20 for a dozen. There were bunches of yellow, pink, white, tangerine, and red roses neatly stored to the side of the stand for custom orders, but the man settled on three red roses in a small glass vase. He said he already knew the price. He'd been to Ozcan's stand before. There was no need to haggle, but Ozcan shaved a dollar off the price just the same. He said the roses had already begun to open. The man thanked Ozcan, cracked a joke about buying women flowers, and was gone.

The time I spent with Ozcan was continually interrupted as people pulled off to the side of the road to buy flowers. Women and men in everything from Buicks to Beemers

KING KONG MAKING A LEFT ONTO THE MONTAUK HIGHWAY

They're... Ba aack...

Great Migration From NYC To The Beach Begins This Weekend

By Diane Strecker

It's Friday evening at the merge of Sunrise Highway as it narrows to one lane in Southampton. Take a good long look at the Lobster Inn because it will stay in view for quite some time. You are now headed east for the weekend. Or, so you thought. You will arrive at your destination, even-tua-lly. You are virtually halted on one of the longest horizontal parking lots in the county. Its spaces run at least from route 27 all the way through East Hampton. And, you don't even need a sticker to park.

So it begins, the annual love – hate relationship that East Enders have with tourism. If you have been coming east forever as I have, you know all the short cuts and back roads. I was well schooled in these maneuvers by my father long ago, who thought he knew every route. I no longer travel this way on Fridays. In fact, Fridays are out completely unless under duress. My friends who summer in Sag Harbor now deal with traffic noise on a route once thought to be a back road. And believe me, if you still don't know exactly where I'm talking about, I'm not telling. The truth is, sadly, most everyone has figured them out and they can no longer be considered back roads, but routes themselves. I have thought over and over, as many have, about a possible solution to this problem but find none. It is a double edged sword, really.

I can't help but think, "Where is everyone going"? Many times, I have looked at the cars ahead and thought, "wouldn't you like to turn off here?," or "here?" But they never do, of course; they stay in front of me till I memorize the plate number. My Dad, who is long gone, would have mumbled profanity. I turn up the music. OK, some times I mumble profanity.

COLLEGE GRADUATES 326 AT COMMENCEMENT

By Denise Napoli

Well wishers gathered on the spacious lawn in front of Southampton College's Chancellor's Hall Sunday afternoon, seeking shade from the sun to witness the conferring of degrees to 326 graduates in the 38th commencement ceremony to be held at the college. It was a gorgeous afternoon, albeit a little warm, when the ceremony began at 3 p.m. Sunday. 227 undergraduate and 99 graduate degrees were given to students young and old, all of them smiling and proud as they made their way down the center aisle at the start of the ceremony to take their seats. The heat prompted the President to take pity on the black-robed graduates and their families and forgo his remarks in order to expedite the ceremony, saying, "Let's move it along," to a grateful crowd. Robert Sillerman, chancellor of Southampton College, urged graduates to, "Know more tomorrow than you know today." Valedictorian Danielle Thibault thanked God for her accomplishments, ending her short speech with a resounding "Rock On!" which met with cheers from her classmates.

Honorary degrees were conferred to Don Hewitt, creator of the television show 60 Minutes and Warren Schwerin, the president and CEO of Related Properties Corporation as well as a trustee of Long Island University. Hewitt was recognized for his work in legitimizing television journalism and changing the way the public receives the news. Schwerin, who also serves as a member of the Board of Overseers at Southampton College, was honored for his career in real estate development and construction as well as his status as an active philanthropist and leader in his community.

The highlight of the ceremony was to be a third honorary degree presented to Vaclav Havel, former president of the Czech Republic as well as a noted playwright and essayist. Havel is best known as a strong advocate for Connecticut. It seemed a very good idea.

It took three years to build the cable. During that time, fringe groups sprang up in Connecticut, opposing the cable even though it had already been approved. An underwater cable would fry the fish. It would pollute the Sound. It would make Connecticut power rates go up. Power would get stolen from Connecticut during the night. And then there was the shunning that Long Island had done to Connecticut in the past. Various ferry companies in Connecticut had proposed service across the sound to Long Island. But no village on Long Island would allow any such ferry to berth there. The ferries, if built, would be sent away, back to wherever it was that they had come from.

Revenge was in the air. Indeed, those that approved the cable were voted out of office. It might be possible to let those bastards on Long Island freeze in the dark.

The cable was completed in the fall of 2002, and Long Island officials were seen shaking hands with reluctant Connecticut officials as the first trickle of power traveled under the Sound.

But then a bombshell was dropped. Divers from Connecticut, going down to look at the cable, determined that in several places, the cable was not buried as deeply below the surface as had been contracted for. The reason for this was that in certain places it could not be put deeper because the water depth did not meet the depth called for in the building plan. Therefore, legally, the cable could not begin sending power because it hadn't been completed. They went straight to court, where a Connecticut judge ruled the contractors would have to dig down, or jackhammer down, into the bedrock with underwater jackhammers or something. The cable could not open.

But then, on August 14, 2003, some idiots in Indiana forgot to pull a switch to stop a wayward power surge and the entire East coast went into darkness for two days. Three weeks after that, a Federal Judge, citing homeland security concerns, ordered the cable turned on, on an "emergency" basis, until the danger of another blackout was past. Power flowed. And so it has until this day. Or until the day before yesterday when it was turned off again.

Amazingly, just one week before Memorial Day Weekend, a judge in Brooklyn ruled that the "emergency" is now over and the earlier court order is in effect again. Obviously, he is not a judge who comes out East in the summertime. Within hours, the cable was turned off.

"This is a great day for Connecticut," said the new Governor there.

The authorities here have pointed out that during the time the power was flowing through the cable, there were 84 requests from Connecticut to help stabilize their electric power. All were honored, and electricity was backwashed to that state. Only 8 similar requests came from Long Island. In addition, there were 15 requests by Connecticut for help in reducing electrical system disturbances caused by lightning strikes, transformer failures, line faults and other unknown events. All of those were honored, too. There were only 3 such requests from Long Island.

"Connecticut is just hurting itself," one Long Island official said. "This has become all about politics in Connecticut."

It doesn't help, however, that in the interim, New York State gave a thumbs down to a plan by Connecticut to dump 20 million cubic yards of dredge spoil from the rivers of Connecticut into Long Island Sound this summer. The objections were on environmental grounds. New York doesn't want Connecticut river bottoms. So what do we do? Connecticut asks. Not our problem, says New York.

What happens on Long Island this summer without the Long Island Sound cable in service is very serious. The island uses from 3,000 to 3,300 megawatts during the peak summertime season, the actual amount varying by the hour. With the cable in use, Richard Kessel of the Long Island Power Authority has on hand a maximum of 3,700 megawatts to deal out. But he loses 330 megawatts with the closing of the cable. And if another piece of equipment goes down, he falls helplessly into brownouts and blackouts. In other words, he's in trouble. What to do?

Hey — it just occurred to me we have these 20 million cubic yards of sludge. One solution would be to sprinkle it on top of the existing underwater cable. It's that old rule — if you can't raise the bridge, lower the water, but in

You may have seen these posters around town. They are on telephone poles. DOG FOUND, the caption says. And there's a picture of him. A really cute white dog with red markings that consist of a bull's eye around his left eye.

"1 Handsome Friendly White Dog Answers to the name Bullseye. Bullseye has shiney (sic) white coat and 2 red rings around his left eye. We'd like to keep him VERY badly. To claim please come to: BULLSEYE INN, 2456 Montauk Highway, Bridgehampton, NY May 27th - July 4, 2004."

There's a Bulls Head Inn in Bridgehampton, right by the monument in the center of town, a four square nineteenth century three story building on a grand lawn. And Target has rented it for the summer, displacing the Bulls Head Antique Shop for the next three months. They'll be here and gone. And this is how they are advertising this "temporary" store.

There's lots of very good advertising and product promotion going on these days, particularly where you have two market leaders going head to head. For example, Coca Cola, reacting to a successful Pepsi promotion where they gave away a million dollars, is hiding 100 amazing cans of Coke in specially marked 10, 12, 20 and 24 packs of the product available in grocery stores and delis around the country. The promotion is going on all summer long and is called "The Unexpected Summer."

You won't know if one of the 100 is inside the packs until you buy it — the special cans weigh the same amount as regular cans. But if you do find one, you will surely notice it. The can has, on a microchip clearly displayed on one side of it, a GPS system and a tiny red button. Press the button, and the can calls a telephone number activating the GPS. The instructions tell you to keep the can with you at all times, and within 7 to 10 days, since Coke can track your whereabouts, you will be receiving a prize. They will come to you.

... the President of Miller Lite bought a rubber foot pad with a Budweiser logo on it. He used it under his desk to put his feet on.

TV ads for this show a helicopter flying through the air with a 2005 Chevy Equinox SUV hanging below it on a cable. This is the first prize, and there are five of them. If you win one, they find you, lower it down to wherever you are, and hand you the keys. Very cool.

You could also win a home entertainment system, cash, or another prize. They will track you down and deliver your prize to you.

Pepsi is countering with a plan called "Win a Billion" this summer. I don't know all the details yet.

aside carelessly. To be so reckless with someone that once held meaning seems to me to diminish all that it once was.

But the sign is not doomed yet, thanks to Brenda Siemer and a number of other Sag Harbor storeowners and residents who came into the street to help her in her fight. Sag Harbor Express Photo took documentation of what was happening so the sign couldn't just disappear without a trace. And Charles Shawcroft, the captain of the Intuition, built a platform on a boat trailer, brought his crewmen, and loaded the sign onto it to carry it off to sanctuary. Joe Pintauro, the playwright, got in touch with the Whaling Museum, where the sign was sheltered its first few homeless nights. It is obvious how many people care about the fate of this sign. Brenda Siemer told me that "...in a time when we have no voice in what's going on in the world around us, this is one moment that I could do something..."

There is still hope for this icon of Sag Harbor. Theater owner Gerry Mallow purchased a replacement sign for $13,000, and it will be difficult to convince him that this purchase was made in vain. He thought that the sign was a good replica, but residents say otherwise. Now, however, he will not be permitted to put up the new sign without approval from the Architectural Review Board.

Brenda Siemer has received calls from people all over the country who have attachments to the sign and want to help. The Historical Society has also acknowledged this as a noble cause, and they will do what they can. A proposed idea would be reinforcing the base with steel to support the old neon letters. There are certainly measures that can be taken to restore this piece of history. At a meeting on Monday, May 24, the fate of the sign was discussed, and Brenda Siemer suggested that set designer Peter Larkin oversee the painting of the words Sag Harbor directly onto the building. That way there would be no replacement until the real sign can be restored or replicated, but an interesting and creative phase of the sign's history would take place this summer.

The theater owner obviously didn't realize how much help he could get if he just appealed to the people of the town. Now Brenda Siemer and others are working to organize fundraisers throughout the summer to try to restore or replicate the sign. It is estimated that it will cost $30-40,000 to restore the sign. It is a true community endeavor that will take a lot of teamwork and a lot of heart, but it looks like Sag Harbor is not lacking in that. This town isn't giving up a piece of its identity without a fight.

human rights and democracy, especially through his outspoken literary works which landed him nearly 5 years in prison. The former president was unable to attend, however, because of illness. Chancellor Sillerman accepted the award in his absence, declaring that Havel's speech, which Sillerman went on to read, represented, "the insightful words of a man...who chose nonviolence as the path to freedom." Havel's speech, in turn, touched on terrorism, the global population explosion, the environment, nuclear weapons and social problems. The speech called on graduates to face the problems of society, and to "identify the situation that needs to be changed and then to analyze its causes."

"We are living one global destiny," Sillerman read from Havel's eloquent and politically charged speech. "The only option is for something to change in the sphere of the spirit...and the attitude of man towards the world." An interesting moment occurred when Sillerman lauded the nonviolent efforts of Havel in seeking reform, contrasting the Czech leader to President Bush. The crowd responded with cheers and boos alike, prompting one man to yell out, "Get on with it!"

As the graduates marched across stage to receive their diplomas, families crowded the

Jerry Seinfeld

Comedian, Actor, Writer

By John Capone

This profile is about nothing—or to be more specific, Jerry Seinfeld, who remains something of enigma. He's an odd figure to be one of Hollywood's enduringly mysterious men, but there you have it. Most everyone is familiar with the Seinfeld who appeared weekly, starting in 1990, on the eponymous sitcom. But was that Jerry the real Jerry? Is Jerry the everyman, or the no man? What do we know about the real Jerry?

We know he is a local Long Island boy, born in Brooklyn, raised in Massapequa ("Massapequa is an old Indian name," he jokes, "It means, 'By the mall.'" Ba-dum-bum.) He went to school at Queens College in Flushing, from which he graduated in 1976 with a degree in theater and communication. Legend has it that he put his degree into practice right away when he hit the stand-up circuit the night of his graduation, going to an amateur night at Catch A Rising Star in New York City. It's fair to say that while it might have been slow and bumpy in patches, the ride hasn't stopped since.

Both Jerrys live in Manhattan,. TV Jerry in an apartment probably not dissimilar to real Jerry's old bachelor apartment; the real Jerry now lives in a multi-million dollar, multi-level apartment on Central Park West. We know that the real Jerry is a family man with a wife and two children. He married Jessica Sklar on Christmas Day in 1999, his daughter was born in 2000, and his son last year. The TV Jerry is a confirmed bachelor who could find something wrong, from bad laughs to picking at peas, with any girlfriend.

The real Jerry has a place in the Hamptons. In March, 2000 he bought Billy Joel 's twelve-acre spread in Amagansett for the then record-setting price of thirty-two million dollars. The TV Jerry went to the Hamptons (the famous episode featuring George's severe shrinkage was set at a house in the Hamptons), so there is some concord there, but not nearly enough.

The real Jerry was a struggling stand-up comedian back in the days when you couldn't flip through your cable stations for ten minutes without seeing three or four comedians standing in front of exposed brick walls in nightclubs. He honed his craft in clubs and had bit parts on television shows throughout the 80s. Jerry's stand-up career was boosted by a guest spot on a 1976 Rodney Dangerfield HBO special, but his breakthrough came when he took over emcee duties at the New York City club, "The Comic Strip." His first taste of real success came with stand-up spots on The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson, the first of which came in 1981.

Jerry first appeared in a recurring role on the sitcom Benson in 1980, when he appeared in four episodes. His dismissal still is a black mark on that show's producers. Seinfeld showed up for script rehearsal, to find that he had been written out of the show only when he reviewed the new script. Another role that might keep you up watching Nick-at-Night was Jerry's one-time appearance on The Cosby Show. After Cliff Huxtable botched fixing his own shower, a professional is brought in. That professional: Plumber Jerry Seinfeld. You'll have to keep your eyes peeled though; Jerry's walk through is quick and he says about two words. And still gets the laugh. In 1989, he made a pilot called "The Seinfeld Chronicles," and struck a blow to just that sort of formula sitcom.

Along with Larry David, he created arguably one of the best sitcoms in television history. We know from watching David's new HBO show, Curb Your Enthusiasm, that there was an awful lot of Larry David in the Jerry Seinfeld character we all know. The popular consensus has always been that Carol Leifer was the model for Elaine, Jerry was Jerry, and Larry David was George. However, careful observation will bear out that this model is erroneous. George and Jerry's personalities are actually pieces of Larry David with a little Jerry sprinkled for flavoring. The character Jerry played had some of his own personal quirks thrown in (Superman, cereal, Snapple) to round out the character, but much of the dialogue sounds very similar to the character David plays on Curb Your Enthusiasm named Larry David. Where then, does the Jerry-doppelganger leave the real Jerry Seinfeld?

Part of the allure of Seinfeld was that, despite his quirks, he remained something of a cipher — a blank slate on which viewers could often project themselves. His credo seems the New York version of the Zen credo, "Nothingness is being; being is nothingness." The character was, in short, the perfect conduit for nothing.

The result of David and Seinfeld's idea for a show about nothing became the top rated existentialist sit-com of all time. In fact, the great achievement of the show is that a group of cynical, jaded and largely malevolent New Yorkers could be embraced and beloved by the country. The episode titled "The Parking Garage," which is mean spirited to say the least and seems as though it might have been co-written by Beckett at times, was named one of the greatest episodes in TV history by TV Guide (something of an arbiter of middle-America).

Lately, Jerry has been seen in commercials on TV and the Internet for a new American Express campaign. A couple of the high-profile spots aired during the Super Bowl this year, but the truly innovative spots are only stopped. Each one was greeted with his warm smile and welcome as if they had been buying flowers from him for the past twenty years. But Ozcan has only been in America for the past five and has only been selling flowers since 2002.

When his eldest daughter was three, Ayyildiz and his family packed everything and immigrated to America. The family first settled in Middle Island. Ayyildiz rented an apartment and bought a car with plans for a new life, but he couldn't find work. Down to his last one hundred dollars, he was finally hired as a part time employee at a gas station. Life continued to be a struggle. As one can imagine, it was almost impossible to support a wife and child on three days' wages, but they scraped by until Ayyildiz landed a new job, another position in another gas station slightly farther east on the island.

One might understand the connection from running a petroleum delivery company to working in a gas station, but the leap from selling fuel to selling flowers is more difficult to comprehend. He spoke with great pride about his first job as a gas attendant, but I wondered how, in fact, he came to sell roses by the roadside. A man from Turkey with neither knowledge of horticulture nor a degree in floral design was somehow making a living in Southampton, selling flowers.

Always wanting to improve his life, Ayyildiz worked hard at the gas station until he was able to find a job that could provide more for his family. After two and a half years he began work at the 7-11 in Hampton Bays. He started on the night shift, 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. His work ethic and gentle nature made an immediate impression on his bosses and they have since become his Green Card Sponsors. When not at 7-11 he delivered pizzas for Dominos, leaving little time for sleep. "I had three hours or two hours only, at that time," but that changed when his wife gave birth to their second child and he scaled back on his work to help raise their two daughters.

And how did he come to sell flowers out of a minivan on the side of the road? Like many people's lives, great gifts come out of even greater tragedies and kindness repays itself is strange ways. "In 2002, I had [a] friend," Ayyildiz began, "Somebody killed him [at the] Coastal gas station and he had [a] son. When he died, I took care of him." The son worked for a wholesale flower dealer and actually came up with the idea, "'Why not sell reverse. If you raise the level of the Sound bottom, won't that raise the water level and therefore lower the cable further down? No?

Kessel says he might be able to solve the projected shortfall by trucking in a whole lot of small generators from elsewhere and hooking them up at transformer junctions. But that's going to cost $38 million that he doesn't have, so it will have to be put on everybody's electric bills as a special assessment from June to December.

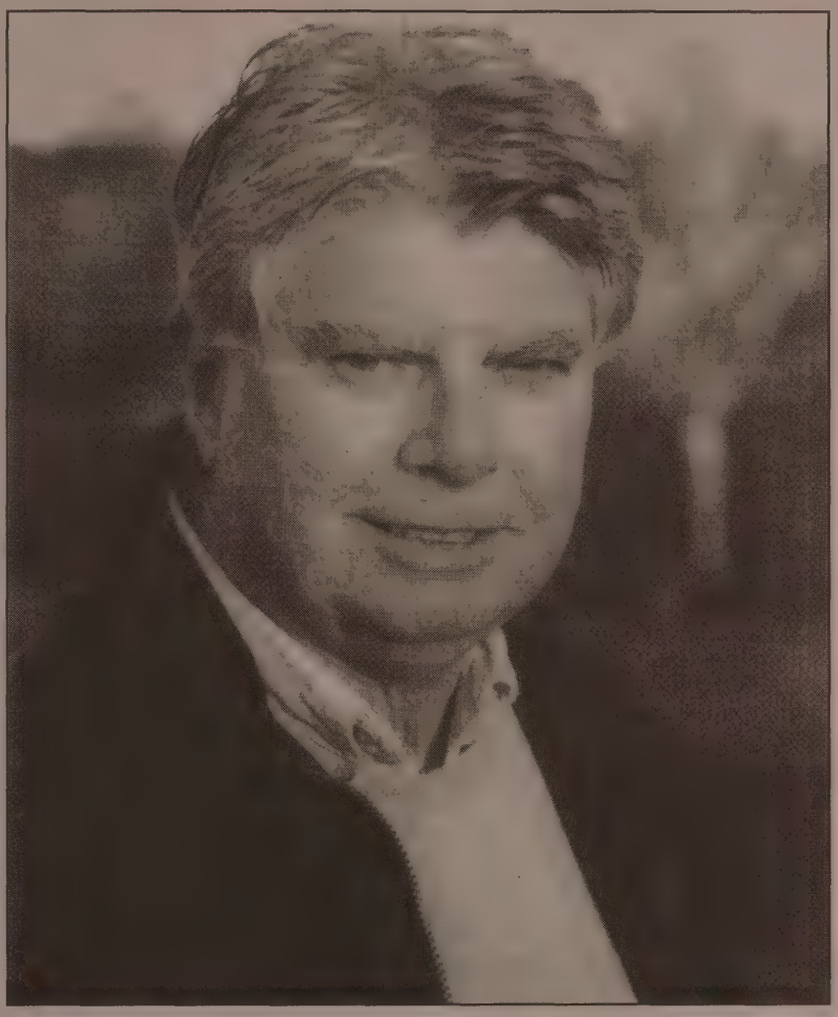

Maybe we ought to just lower the tailgates on everybody's SUV's, slide in those buckets of out-of-state electricity and bring them out.

Just drive very, very carefully.

Who's Here

James Brady
U.S. Marine, Author

By Joe Mintzer

One of the first lessons writers are taught is to write about what they know. Looking at the books James Brady has written, he has obviously known intimately the worlds of publishing, high fashion, armed conflict and the currents and crosscurrents of the Hamptons. As one of the most prolific writers of our day, where did it all begin?

"This is going to sound trite, but I always wanted to be a writer, from the time I was a kid growing up in an average, lower-middle class neighborhood in Sheepshead Bay in Brooklyn."

But in between the Brooklyn of 1928, the year he was born, to the Hamptons of 2004, James Brady went from being a copy boy at the New York Daily News to becoming the successful writer of fifteen works of fiction and non-fiction — with one more scheduled for release early next year.

His personal favorite? The best-selling novel, The Marines of Autumn. Non-fiction? The Coldest War, about his two years as a second lieutenant in the Korean "police action." His current work in progress takes Jim Brady full circle. As the book's title makes clear, Korea is The Scariest Place In The World. They've got nukes, he says, "and they're crazy."

How did he get to Korea in the first place? "I was in college, I was just starting to work as a copy boy at the New York Daily News, so I enlisted — to avoid the draft — which had been reinstituted in fifty-one — and next thing I know, I'm a Marine rifle platoon leader, freezing my ass off in Korea. I also found myself acting as an intelligence officer, interrogating POWs."

On that subject, what did he think of the headlines from Iraq? "Look," he said, "in Korea we knew right from wrong. We followed the Geneva Convention. These guys in Iraq were an incredible bunch of jerks. As for the war itself, it's a horrible mistake. A year ago, in my column in Crain's, I said, 'I'm against this war. It will harvest a bitter peace.' We took our eye off the ball, Iraq wasn't a real threat — Al Qaeda and all its relatives — that's our enemy."

After Korea, he became a foreign correspondent, working in London and Paris, writing about fashion, with Coco Chanel (read his novels Design and Paris One) as his mentor. Then he went on to become publisher of Women's Wear Daily under John Fairchild, then to Harper's Bazaar, was fired for trying to modernize it too quickly, then spent nine years with Rupert Murdoch (read the novel The Press Lord), followed by a position as editor-in-chief at New York Magazine and then associate publisher of the New York Post. Now, he writes regularly for Ad Age as well as Parade.

Walking to a shelf of his books, he says, "I got four books out of the Marine Corps, four out of Paris, WWD and Chanel, (read Paris One and Designs) and four comic novels out of the Hamptons." The titles, to name a few, range from Gin Lane, to Further Lane to The House That Ate The Hamptons, to Warning of War.

Lots of books, but no film adaptations — yet. Several of his books have optioned, dropped, re-optioned and re-re-optioned. He is hoping, he says, for Warning of War to make it to the big screen. It's the story about a thousand U.S. Marines who were stationed in North China before Pearl Harbor, who were ordered to leave the mainland via Shanghai, just before the Japanese attack, and who left behind several hundred Marines marooned in garrisons from Peking to the Gobi Desert, caught short by the "warning of war."

His many books have been critically acclaimed by reviewers, historians, the military and journalists, including Walter Cronkite, Dan Rather, Time Magazine, Entertainment Weekly, Dominick Dunne and many others.

There's something special about a Brady novel — people we all know, or have read about, show up on its pages, some by inference (Oh, I know who that is, that's Martha Stewart), or that's Ira Rennert, the man behind The House That Ate the Hamptons, the monster rising on the ocean-front in Sagaponack. But it's not just celebrities, here or around the world, who make it one way or another into his books. You'll also find the local folks he admires, people like the Vorpahl family of Bonacker baymen who have been here for generations, or Dreesen's Rudy DeSanti, or the bartender at the Blue Parrot, or the Reverend David Parker of the Methodist Church. His writing habits for those who want to know those things: up at five, reads Times and Post, works until 2:30. Switched from typewriter to word processor ten years ago.

So who does he "hang with" here? Not too many people, he says. "I spend five long weekend days here every week when I can; it's the American dream for me. I'm not despairing of what's happening out here, like Stephen Gaines is. I had a minor stroke a couple of years ago, but I'm fine. I have two daughters and five grandchildren. They come out here, we've got a simple house, a pool, big lawn and a huge cherry tree you could climb in and get lost in." Inside, the walls are plastered with pictures taken with the Kennedys, Imelda Marcos, Yves. St. Laurent. You name them, James Brady has known them.

I spend five long weekend days here every week when I can; it's the American dream for me.

Altogether, not too shabby for another kid from Brooklyn who has certainly written about what he knows, not making it all up out of "whole cloth," but always reaching to tell the whole truth, in fiction and in fact about our world, and most urgently about the issues of war and peace.

He has marched in East Hampton's Memorial Day parade for almost all of the twenty-seven years he has lived here. This year he will speak at that event. He should be worth listening to.

We all love the East End and for the few short months we share the beaches and the excitement as the crowds converge. It is all part of summer here. The cultured flock to the John Drew Theater, the yachts dock off Sag Harbor, the lobstermen pull up the pots, the surfers paddle out and the fund raisers begin. The restaurants are packed so tight, even the most seasoned waitstaff is put to the test. And, unless you are among the privileged few who come in by way of East Hampton airport or by private yacht, you sit in the traffic along with every one else.

Somehow, you miss something if you don't get to watch the landscape and culture change as you drive through the farms and the villages and finally to the ocean, for which most of us come. I have come to love the sight of the clam guy on the side of the road in Hampton Bays as much as I do the sight of the Palms, flowering pink perfection in East Hampton. I feel the onset of the season when I see people congregate in front of the sidewalk doors of Bobby Van's and line up outside the Talkhouse. People swarm around the Farmers Market in Amagansett as if they are giving something away. The produce just seems better there.

It all gets under your skin, so to speak. Not like an itch, but an overall melting through. It creeps in slowly and unsuspectingly, till one day, you realize you are hooked.

It is why so many who thought they came to spend only a summer now live here. That is a common occurrence in these parts. One night, at one of our editorial meetings, one of the writers was talking about how he just up and moved from the city this past winter. When someone asked him why, he said something about how most people thought he was crazy. Crazy or not I had a good idea what happened, no explanation needed. Like a first love, this place stays with you. It is this feeling that beckons you and its voice that calls. I can't remember exactly when this happened for me, but if I close my eyes, I can feel the wet mist that lies heavy over the ocean at day's end or feel the reeds brush across my back as I make my way down a narrow cliff path. I can see the sun spread jewels over the water on a perfect summer day and feel the hot sand on my feet. I smell a night beach fire and watch the embers lift and disappear into the damp night air. I see a palette of colors in the zinnias of mid-summer that turn Bridgehampton into heaven.

Everyone wants to be here and everyone wants to think they stake some kind of claim, for whatever the reason. Everyone wants a piece of the East End, and they like to think that their experience here is more worthy of its ownership. I remember hearing a conversation on the beach last summer, "renters vs. owners." It was very amusing. On another occasion, "locals vs. summer home owners." The second debate cancelled out any validity to the first. I remember looking out over the ocean at times like those and thinking how it knew none of that. Some feel they simply care more, have been here longer or know the right people. The list goes on and on to what is now considered EC (eastend correct). The truth is, this place and all of its effects belong to everyone and belong to no one. It will all remain here long after our silly arguments are done.

Tonight, I am in Amagansett with the sounds of the ocean crashing behind me as I write. I listen to the same sounds that I heard as a child from my bunk bed each summer night in Montauk. I hear as the waves lift and pound. It is those same waves that will roll me to sleep tonight.

Not too long ago, I thought of moving back to Northern California, but during a Shelter Island ferry crossing I remembered all these things. It seems they are not only under my skin but have now grown roots. I realized I would miss it all far too much. There is something truly unique about the compilation of the landscape, waters and out lying islands that sets this place apart from anywhere else. I believe it was Mick Jagger who once said he had been all over the world but he had never experienced anything quite like Long Island's East End. Many people feel that way and it is the echoes of sentiments such as those that have made this area world renowned. It is that and all these things combined, that create that damn traffic.

This summer, as the cars filter out in droves and veer off the highway into the local businesses and beaches, we need to remember from whence we came (as most of us are transplants ourselves) and be as accepting and cordial as we possibly can be. We can only ask that visitors do the same by respecting the time and energy it takes for its care and preservation.

In the words of Rodney King, "Can't we all just get along?"

Bill Stahl looks exactly like what an English auctioneer in America ought to look like. He has a ruddy red complexion, a full head of wavy white hair, a cherubic but commanding disposition and is just the slightest bit on the chubby side. I'd say he was 45 years old.

It all happened very fast. Painting #1, a beach scene by Edward Henry Potthast, painted around 1890, was projected onto the giant screen in full color. And to prove they had it, a revolving door slowly turned to open a large, padded, pillowed niche in the wall. And there was the painting, prominently framed in gold, leaning against the back. It was estimated to be worth $50,000 to $70,000, according to the information in the catalogue, and it went for much more. But you barely saw a bid being made. Just a wave of a pencil. A paddle held up. It started at $40,000 and rose in increments of $5000 to about $75,000 when all had dropped out but two bidders.

"I have $75,000, now $85,000, now $95,000." He paused for a moment. He looked at one of the bidders. "Against you, sir," he said. A sort of gentle admonition. Do you wish to be humiliated and beaten in front of all these people? "$100,000." Another pause. Then — "I'm selling it for $100,000." And that was the end of it. It had gone for almost double what it was estimated at.

Painting #2 was another beach scene by the same painter, and it was estimated to go between $60,000 and $80,000 and it went for $170,000. "170 on the phone," is what Bill Stahl said, as he gaveled it down. "Thank you all."

The dog was snoring softly.

And so it went. #3 through #6 each went for about double their estimates. And then came #7, a huge painting of a reclining woman by John Singer Sargent. This was expected to sell for between one and one and a half million. But it got to one and a half and then just flashed right by.

"One point five, one six, one eight, one nine, two oh, two one, two two, two three, two four. I am at two four. On my right at two four, up against you, sir. Fair warning. I'm selling at 2.4." Gavel bang. "All done."

Finally we got to number ten, the William Merritt Chase. All paintings had gone for far more than their top estimate. How would this fare? Estimated value was $80,000 to $120,000, as I said. The self portrait appeared huge on the screen, and small and real in the revolving door alcove. And we began.

"I have a bid at 50. 65. 80, 85. 90. 95. 100. 110. 120. Still here. Bidding? I am selling it. Susan on the phone at 120."

And that was it. No side comments, no fair warning, no all done. The auction moved on.

Now, I know this is crazy, but the thought occurred to me, considering all the drama and conversation and pauses during the sales of the earlier pieces, that something was amiss. Just BAM. Sold for the estimated high, after nine pieces went through the roof. Had there been "leave that alone" conversation in all the talk going on before the auction? I know nothing about these auctions. This is all speculation.

Piece #12, a huge painting of Robert Louis Stevenson and his wife, by John Singer Sargent, was estimated at between $5 and $7 million.

"...gentleman on the center aisle, 5.1." It got up to 6.7. There was a pause. Stahl to a reluctant bidder; "I just do what I'm told. Your TURN!" (Laughter.) It soon turned into a battle between a buyer on the phone and two in the room and it quickly rose up through its ceiling.

"7.5. 7.55. 7.6." All done. Fair warning. (Hand goes up with the gavel). "7.7. 7.75. (Laughter) 7.8. 7.85 with Charlie. Fair warning. All done. 7.85."

We left the auction. I asked at the desk in the seventh floor lobby there if it were possible to know more about the buyer and she said it wasn't. So we went back down in the elevator.

"I have no idea what I am talking about here with the Chase," I told my significant other when we got out to the street.

"No, you don't," she said.

"Still, everything, even those that went for less than the Chase, went for more than their top estimate. Except our painting."

The idea put me in a bad mood.

I called the Parrish Art Museum and spoke to Erin Ferguson to tell her the Chase had gone for $120,000 and ask did she know who them on the roadside?'" Ayyildiz recalled the conversation, "[He said,] 'I can help you, my boss will give you flowers and you can sell [them] on the road.'" Ayyildiz immediately saw the potential in the offer and as always decided to give it a try.

The first year, he started off small, only selling flowers on Valentine's and Mother's Day, but when he calculated the response he was receiving, Ayyildiz decided to try more venues. In his off-time, with permission from his bosses at 7-11, he set up a flower stand outside the store. When he wasn't working in 7-11 he was working outside of it.

It was never easy and although the initial sales were successful, Ayyildiz said the time constraints of working at 7-11 and running his own business was difficult. "My wife and me [worked in the] nighttime, until one o'-clock, two o'clock making flowers." But the family saw a future and the company slowly began to expand. In 2003, Ayyildiz left 7-11 to give his flower business his undivided attention. The business quickly gained momentum and now besides selling roadside roses, his company supplies almost forty area stores and gas stations with flower arrangements. "I have a business...I have an accountant, I pay taxes, I'm happy. It's my own business, if they buy, they buy. It's good. Thank God...I'm trying to buy a house."

Ayyildiz confesses there is potentially a large problem. Despite possessing the proper permits, he currently awaits a court appearance for not adhering to a clause in the Southampton peddling permit's code. The code in question states that Ayyildiz must travel 1500 feet every half an hour. He contends that setting up and breaking down his stand every thirty minutes would leave him no time to service his customers. "We are not ice cream people," he said. "Ice cream people are always moving, but flowers? How can I sell flowers?"

Yet, when he spoke, Ayyildiz seemed confident that his court appearance would not cause any major setbacks to his growing

INVADING YOUR FRIENDS & OTHER STORIES

By Dan Rattiner

Why did we invade Iraq? Well, it wasn't because they had weapons of mass destruction. And it wasn't because they were in bed with Osama bin Laden. Now I think we are about to find out it isn't is because the Iraqis love freedom.

You will remember that our President said that when we crossed into Iraq with flags flying, the Iraqis would run out into the streets to hug and kiss us for bringing them the gift of freedom. They didn't, in spite of a few people who threw shoes, danced around and waved handkerchiefs for the camera because we paid them. But we are a forgiving nation.

Deep in their hearts, the President said, no matter how deeply it was repressed, freedom burned, as it does with all peoples around the globe. The Iraqis would soon come to see that, feel that, and thank us for it. Not because this gift had come from America. But because this gift had come from God. America. Love us as the messenger.

It is going to turn out that four things are true. Freedom is nice for the Iraqis. Starbucks, McDonalds, Cell Phones, all night Delis and just-released movie DVDs are even nicer. As a matter of fact, Starbucks, McDonalds, Cell Phones, all night Delis and movie DVDs with freedom is absolutely the nicest, but if we have Starbucks, McDonalds, Cell Phones, all night Delis and movie DVDs with a dictatorship, that is okay too. It's really all about Starbucks, McDonalds, Cell Phones, all night Delis and movie DVDs.

And here's the shocker. All of those things had been brought to Iraq and Baghdad years ago by Saddam Hussein. You can argue he was a brutal dictator who needed to be re-available on the Internet. These spots, which American Express calls "webisodes," are long-form commercials (three or four minutes) detailing the further (often mundane) adventures of Jerry and Superman. In the long-form spots Jerry interacts with an old-school looking, animated Superman who goes with him to a musical in the first spot, which debuted just two months ago, and on a cross-country road trip in the newest spot, which went up just this month. The spots both end up in some conflict where Jerry's charge card, not Superman, saves the day. The next stop for the Man of Steel and the Man of Small-talk is rumored to be a fifteen-minute television special airing on NBC.

Jerry's next big project, Bee Movie, a CGI animated movie about the secret life of anthropomorphic bees set in a metropolis resembling Manhattan, is expected in 2005 or early-2006 from Dreamworks. The project is said to have gotten its start when Jerry bumped into Steven Spielberg at an event in East Hampton last summer and they bandied about ideas for an animated feature. The movie, which Seinfeld is producing, will also feature his voice and writing talents.

One of the interesting things about Bee Movie, besides the fact that it marks Jerry's return, is that it's the first time in a long time that he won't be playing "himself." The 2002 documentary Comedian featured Seinfeld as Seinfeld the stand-up, and in the American Express Superman spots, Seinfeld basically reprises the old Jerry role.

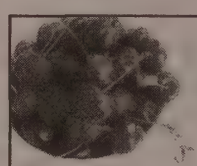

My theory is that the real Jerry could only be found at the crossroads of the universe — First and First. In that place you might see the stand-up morphing into the lonely bachelor morphing into the Porsche collector morphing into the family guy morphing into an anthropomorphic bee, and all the while George (or is it Larry David or Jason Alexander?) would be shouting, "Worlds are colliding, Jerry! Worlds are colliding!"

business or the potential for his new life here on the East End. "Everybody knows me...I like it, I like America, God bless America...I grow here, in America...My family's here."

As I made my leave, Ozcan handed me a bouquet of flowers and asked me to give them to my mother. "Tell her they are from me," he said, "because I miss my mother so much." Aside from the homesick sentiment, there was something reassuring about my conversation with Ayyildiz. It was more than his happiness and genuine optimism. It was something familiar, like the stories I had heard of the nineteenth century immigrants who contributed so much to the building of this country and whose lives, like Ozcan Ayyildiz's flowers, grew and blossomed in America.

bought it? She didn't.

Then I called the Rogers Memorial Library and spoke to the director, Deborah Engelhardt, who told me she didn't know who the buyer was, but that the board of the library was going to make an official announcement next Monday afternoon. That would be before our next deadline.

"That'll be fine," I said. "But if you hear anything sooner, let me know."

She said sure, and we walked back to my girlfriend's apartment. She changed and went downtown to the Village, and I passed out on the sofa for three hours. So did the dog.

alleys, taking photos and yelling cheers of congratulation. Farther away in the shade, small children were making friends and tossing balls or playing tag on the lawns. It was a relaxed, casual atmosphere for graduates and their families, despite the occasional complaint about the sun and weekend traffic. As the ceremony ended and the faculty filed offstage to the tune of "New York, New York," a few renegade caps were thrown in the air, celebrating the end of 4 years of classes and the beginning of life in the "real world." Lucky for local graduates, the real world in the Hamptons can't possibly start until at least after Memorial Day weekend, though upon leaving, graduation attendees found out that the traffic, at least, has already begun.

moved. But the truth was that if you kept your nose clean, you could get the Starbucks, McDonalds, Cell Phones, all night Delis and movie DVDs. Baghdad was our friend. We invaded our friend.

The war we are in the middle of is between westernized society and Muslim religious extremism. There is a rule in the Koran that says you may not kill. But it also says that if somebody prevents you from practicing your religion you are free to attack. Westernized societies in the Arab world — in terms of politics and business — include Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Kuwait, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan and Syria and all have succumbed to the temptations of the west, and made billions selling oil. King Hussein of Jordan, who passed away five years ago, got his greatest joy speeding racing cars through the desert at 140 miles an hour. He and all the others were an insult to Islam.

From our enemy's perspective, all that noise, all those car radios playing loud, all that behavior of women exposing their bodies, all that money and all those cassette tapes — THAT is what was interfering with their praying fifteen times a day, observing the ancient laws and living the simple life as their ancestors had for thousands of years.

Ever wonder why bombs go off in such places that do not support America? Places like Turkey, Saudi Arabia, Indonesia, Germany and Russia? Strange, isn't it? All the governments of those places are westernized. All have betrayed the religious leaders of right wing Islam. All have impinged on the Mullah's ability to get the people to follow the teachings of Muhammad. All are our friends.

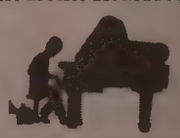

Here are some world leaders who are friendly with us in our way of life. Guess how many are dictators, some of them benevolent, but dictators nevertheless. Hosni Mubarak of Egypt. Hamid Karzai of Afghanistan. Pervez Musharraf of Pakistan. Wen Jiabao of China. The answer? All of them.

In World War II, the government published silhouettes of enemy airplanes, so pilots would not be confused and try to shoot down allied airplanes. KNOW YOUR ENEMY, the

ON THE TRAIL, NOT ON THE TRAIL, WHAT TRAIL?

By Emily Weitz

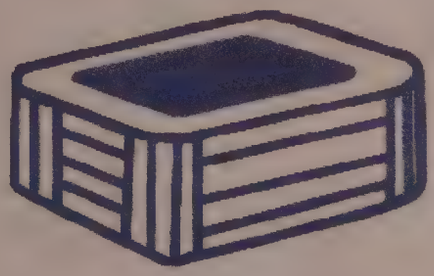

The weekend morning was blessed with May sunshine in true form, and myself and another member of the Dan's Papers staff, who shall remain nameless, decided to make the most of one of the Hamptons' most beauitufl parks. We met in the parking lot prepared for the leisurely winding and strenuous hills of the Serpent's Back trail in Montauk. According to the map, it's a 3-4 mile hike, and a trail called Oceanview promised some beautiful vistas. We wandered through the sun-drenched forests, amber with the reflection of sunshine on the branches of budding trees. I took mental note of peeking buttercups and the striking contrast of burgundy buds against a pale blue sky. I had my romantic story all planned out as we wandered along the narrow path, lost in conversation and the stillness of Saturday morning. Every time we came to a crossroads, the conversation would pause long enough for a quick glimpse at the map, at which point we would point to where we were, or believed we were, and decided where to go. At one point, however, we came to a T. Sadly, our location according to the map was not a T. The gap between theory and reality widened. But we went with our instinct, and decided to plow forward, on a "path" through the woods, which, according to theory, was the right way. Suddenly, blue skies clouded over, and our fairytale walk got interesting.

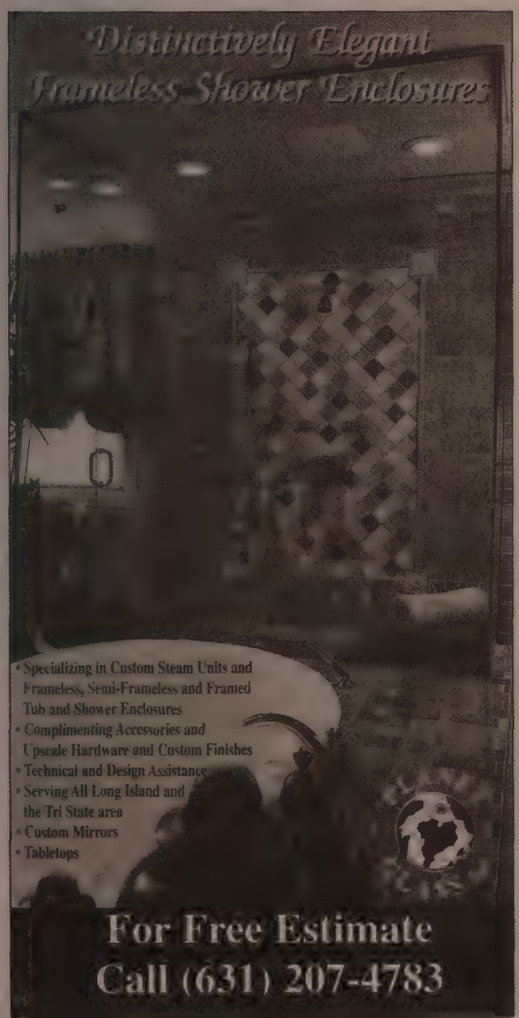

We were wading through bushes, following a futile trail, when suddenly I looked down and saw... a carcass. Rib cage, four feet, that's when I started screaming. My companion caught sight of it just as I started running, and she was screaming, too. Suddenly our magical forest had become haunted. I lunged away from the giant carcass only to become tangled in a thorn bush. These vines, which in a romantic story would have already blossomed into roses, were encased in sharp thorns. I detangled my ponytail from the bush, lept over the carcass, and started running, my companion not far behind, though she paused to gaze into the face of this long-departed "raccoon/deer" for a bit longer. When we emerged from the thick brush, we were all turned around. The map said one thing, the sun said something else, and all I could think of was my near brush with death by thorn bush. After running each other around in circles with deductive reasoning and a few bites of a stale granola bar, we decided on a direction. We walked. And we walked. Our conversation kept flowing, though the darkening clouds lingered over our heads along with our unspoken uncertainty. And we walked.

I guess when we made the decision on which way to go, we also decided where we were on the map, which wasn't really our decision to make. This came back to haunt us.

"It seems like the scale on the map is different on this part of the trail than it was before," I said. Don't you just hate when fixed scales change of their own free will? Not promising. After a third left turn and a long straightaway that we agreed would bring us back to the cars, my companion had learned some of the more revealing details of my life and vice versa. And the sun, masked by clouds, was indisputably retreating. The muscles in my rear end began the shout that burst from my mouth, "It can't be this far!"

It just didn't compute. How could I have covered one and a half relationships, three countries, and the Rocky Mountains in three miles? And listened as she recalled San Francisco and Italy? It just wasn't possible. We had been walking too far. We paused for a moment to appreciate the beauty of the warm forest meadow, fit for wood nymphs, before we admitted that we must be lost. To our surprise, though, we heard the gentle lulling of passing cars in the distance. We followed the familiar, far from natural sound.

Stumbling up a buttercup-littered slope, we came upon good old reliable: Montauk Highway. Sometimes there is nothing more comforting than nature. Other times, there is nothing more comforting than familiarity. It looked familiar. Grey pavement curving through wooded acres. Which bend in the road had we happened upon, though? Should we walk ltef or right? Should we walk along the road or go back to the woods and walk alongside it? We kept pointing out the facts that we knew: The sun sets in the west, the Atlantic Ocean is east, our cars are in the parking lot, Citarella closes at 5. Somehow, they weren't leading us out of the woods. Then it happened. Our knight in shining armor appeared with sirens on his roof. A state trooper came whizzing by, and my instincts flared up as I started flailing my arms. The car did a 180 and started towards us. We were saved.

Luke looked out the window over the tops of his shades as we simultaneously flooded him with the story of our plight. His voice came out as refreshing as cool rain. "Would you like a ride to your cars, ladies?" I was already halfway in the car while my friend considered the idea. I never thought I'd be so eager to be in the backseat of a police car. The feeling didn't last long, though, because just around the bend, not more than 1000 feet from the spot where we emerged frazzled from our haunted forest adventure, sat our Volkswagens. We bid Luke goodbye as we returned to the comprehensible reality of street signs and traffic lights, gently directing us home.

RUN SATURDAY IN THE POTATO HAMPTON 10K

There are a lot of signs that summer is approaching: the pink petals littering Further Lane, the warmth of the sand under bare feet, and the hastening preparations for Memorial Day festivities. For the past twenty-six years, the Potatohampton Minithon 10K has been a tradition over Memorial Day Weekend. It's a chance to get out into the warming air, to whip your body into shape, and to run or walk for a good cause.

It all began in a February bilzzard in 1978 when an employee of the Sheriff's office suggested the idea to Dan Rattiner: a marathon. At first he was taken aback by the idea that he would be the one to sponsor such an athletic endeavor, at a time when platform shoes still dominated the scene and the eighties fitness craze was yet to descend, but he decided to go for it. That year, there were 368 joggers, and each one got an actual Hampton potato for participating. I wonder if any of those first joggers still have their potatoes. Let's hope not.

Dan's story from that issue of Dan's Papers retold the novelty of the first Potatohampton. In fact, from his point of view, people who endeavored to run were quite "looney." In an excerpt from that 1978 issue, Dan said that it was "a crazy thing. Here they are, four hundred looney people in tight pants, headbands, thirty dollar jogging shoes, and t-shirts that proclaim JOGGERS DO IT BETTER..." Wow, thirty dollar jogging shoes? That must have been a real splurge at the first Potatohampton. But now that exercise is all the rage, people in sweatbands and exercise suits aren't quite as silly and thirty dollars wouldn't even buy you one jogging shoe. But one thing remains: Potatohampton is still a staple in many people's Memorial Day traditions.

Through the years, Potatohampton has had its share of blue skies and rain. In 1997, for example, the 650 registered joggers splashed over the finish line under ominous skies. But the participation has been growing exponentially, rain or shine. By the year 2000, under sunny skies, there were tables set up where people handed out sample suntan lotion, there were masseuses and weight loss specialists.

The tradition continues as the race prepares for its 26th year. Little did Dan know that 26 years later people would still be kicking off the summer with the Potatohampton10K. This year there will be tables where sponsors will be giving out fruit and water as well as information on activities that will be going on this summer. Since the first race, Potatohampton has gained sponsors including Shape, King Kullen, Cancos Tile, and the the Hain Celestial Group, and has benefitted such noble causes as The American Cancer Society and Multiple Sclerosis.

This year's race is to benefit The Foundation for The Advancement of Cardiac Therapies (FACT). The founder of this organization is "Doc Hollywood" Mehmet Oz, M.D., and he will be participating in the event. FACT is a new charity that works to increase awareness about cardiac threats in American slogan read.

Iraq is our friend. Always had been. It boggles the mind, but Saddam Hussein worked for more than a decade as a paid informer for the C. I. A. And the weapons of mass destruction he DID have — until Bush Sr. and the UN came through and destroyed them — were sold to him by America in what was at that time a battle against the Communist menace.

People say George Bush is stupid. I think that is a terrible thing to say about a man we, in our democracy, elected as our President.

I listened to him speak the other night. He talked about bringing the Iraqis freedom and an Iraqi constitution. He did not talk about bringing them Starbucks, McDonalds, Cell Phones, Delis and DVDs. And how they were just learning to love all that within the confines of a brutal dictator who in his patriotism enjoyed sabre rattling us out of our socks about oil. But Bush will learn. It's sort of on-the-job learning.

My guess is that when we leave Iraq we will leave it as it embraces Starbucks, McDonalds, Cell Phones, Delis and DVDs, while having a dictator with a sham parliament. Bush will say freedom won.

The really strange thing is that in the long run — I'm talking in the range of a hundred years when westernized society has pumped enough crap into the atmosphere to pretty much destroy life on earth, the Muslim Extremists will be able to walk around with signs that read PREPARE TO MEET THY DOOM. And they will have been right.

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

This excerpt comes from the award winning book Men's Lives written by Peter Matthiessen of Sagaponack and published by Random House. The Men's lives referred to in the title are the Bonackers, those who fish the seas in East Hampton year around, working the bays with nets and lines. It continues to be in print in hardcover and in paperback, and can be found at most bookstores.

Men's Lives
By Peter Matthiessen
Chapter 6

In the spring of 1954, I joined the ocean haul-seine crew led by Ted Lester who lived in Amagansett on a short street through the scrub oak woods known as Cross Highway. The obscure street was an extension of Abraham's Path, connecting the Montauk Highway with the old Indian trails back of the dunes that are now called Further Lane and Skimhampton Road. This community of small houses and big work yards full of dories and beach vehicles and nets spread out to dry was known locally as Poseyville, or Fish Gut Alley, and most of its inhabitants were known as Poseys. It is the Posey Lester Clan in Amagansett that Milt Miller has called "the backbone of what fishin is still left today."

Of the original six sons of Nathan Lester, the eldest, Harry, and the second youngest, Harold, or Happy, had died in recent years, while Charlie (who liked to recall the fresh swordfish he once found on the beach in front of the fashionable Maidstone Club) had retired from the water and was raising vegetables and chickens for his small store near Ted's house; the other three, Frank, Bill, and Ted, each ran a haul-seine crew.

In 1954, bony-faced Frank Lester, calm and smiling, was already in his mid-sixties, and shared the leadership of his family crew with his son Francis; because of his ever-present pipe, he was known affectionately as Cap'n Smoker. His brother Bill, a decade younger and still strong and vigorous (I remember him as a big silver-haired handsome man in black shirt and black waders), had the best equipment and a veteran crew that was usually "high hook" (largest landings of fish) in a given season. Ted Lester, ten years younger than Bill, intensely curious and energetic, was the most innovative fisherman, and the most ambitious; he sold frozen bait (bunker chum and squid) to the charter boats and bait shops and shipped fish to New York from his Montauk Seafood, a fish-packing and storage house that was used by the Posey haul-seine crews in an effort to hold back shipments of fish until the Fulton Fish Market would offer a fair price. Whether they liked it or not – for even among his brothers, he was controversial – Ted Lester was the spokesman for the fishermen, not only in their running battles with the market but in their defense against sportfishing groups, which had renewed a long war of attrition against the commercial men in an effort to prohibit the netting of striped bass.

A quick stocky man with a stiff brush of hair that stood straight up on his forehead, giving him an expression of surprise, Theodore Roosevelt Lester (born in a rock-ribbed Republican county in 1908) was always in a rush and often shouting, for want of a better way to let off steam. I met him first on a wet May morning in the 4 a.m. darkness of his yard as he hurried to start up his ancient silver truck, a former weapons carrier of World War II. The truck's hood had rusted out and fallen by the wayside, and because it had rained hard all night, the wiring was sodden. Ted Lester swore as he dumped gasoline on his engine and set it on fire.

The big silver truck, once the blaze was smothered, gave a shudder and exploded into life. Seeing my thunderstruck expression, Ted winked and said, "There's a lot of shit built into them things, bub, and the more you kick out of 'em, the less is left in there to kick you back." Ted's language – and Bill's and Frank's, too – was actually a lot less rough than that of the younger fishermen, and if one of his daughters, who listened to blue speech all day as the seine crews came and went to the freezer under the house, said so much as "damn," Ted would chase her right across the yard, yelling in the same strong language that the girls were forbidden to use, "By the Jesus, Vinnie [or Gloria or Ruth Ann], I hear any more of them damn words...!"

Years before, chased in this manner by his father, Ted's son Stewart had fallen in a woodpile, driving a hole through his cheek that survived as a permanent scar to the left of his mouth. The only son in a household of five daughters, nineteen-year-old Stewart was already contesting Ted's ideas on how things should be done. As strong, tough, and stubborn as four sons wrapped into one, he yelled back fiercely at his father until he went fishing on his own about five years later.

Jenny Bennett Lester, as lively and talkative as her husband, gave us peanut butter toast and coffee, as she would do each morning of good fishing weather for the next two months. It was still dark when we went down the back steps, hauled on stiff black bulky waders, squashed onto the hard front seat of the silver truck with its sweet smell of rotted fish scales, and rode down Indian Wells Highway to the ocean. Stewart followed in a Model A Ford with a winch mounted in front; this ancient and indestructible vehicle, replaced the following year by a Jeep pickup, was the last "A" that ever worked on the ocean beach. At the beach landing, Ted yanked his gears into four-wheel drive, stepped on the pedal that he called the "exhilarator," and headed east along the beach in the first light. Besides Stewart, John Cole, and me, Ted's steady crew that spring was brash young Richard, youngest son of his brother Frank; Richard's brother Lewis, Milt Miller, and Pete Scott were among the men who filled in here and there on Ted's five-man crew.

On my first haul, at sunrise that May morning, we loaded up two truckloads of bass, and our shares on this haul came close to two hundred dollars – a very good week's pay in the early fifties. In our excitement, it was clear to John and me that commercial fishing was the path to fortune, but in the next two weeks, rising at 3 a.m. and fishing hard whenever the weather permitted, we scarcely made enough to pay for gas. Then the weather improved, we made money again, packing and icing fish until 10 at night, staggering out again five hours later, hands hot and swollen from fish spines and twine cuts and razor slashes from the sharp gill covers of big thrashing bass seized out of the bag by the eye sockets and tail and lugged up the beach to the trucks; sometimes I would be home after a half day's work by 8 in the morning. But on such days I would breakfast on butterfish, or shad roe fresh out of the ocean (Cap'n Ted declared that shad roe was disgusting, apart from being worth too much to be eaten by the likes of us). If the fish were in, and Ted wanted to rush back to the beach, Jenny Lester might send us off with a bellyful of her bluefish-and-pancakes.

Then there's this bunch of guys on Madison Avenue sitting around drinking beer trying to think up new TV commercials for the two market leaders, Bud Light and Miller Light.

Bud Light, having slowly seen their lead over Miller Light fritter away because of some remarkable Miller advertising, is essentially taking the gloves off. Something has to be done, or Miller Light will soon dethrone the King of Beers.

Last week, Budweiser wholesalers around the world watched a presentation given by the internal Bud TV network — yes they have a TV network — entitled "Unleash the Dawgs." Accompanying it was a memo from Michael Owens, the company's vice president for sales, which noted that what they were about to see was "our strategic response to some of the desperate tactics Miller Lite is using."

The Miller campaign, which has caused this huge shift in the beer drinking consumption wars — billions of dollars are now going to Miller that used to go to Bud — involves this wonderful Presidential Debate setup, where a fairly dumb but enthusiastic proponent of Miller Lite, standing at a podium on screen right, takes jabs at the enthusiastic proponent of Budweiser, who stands at a podium on screen left — a Budweiser Clydesdale horse. With blinders.

"Is there some reason my worthy opponent has no answers to my claims?" the man shouts. "Obviously not. My opponent has blinders on." He thumps a bottle of frosty cold Miller Lite next to the microphone.

In another commercial, he starts off by apparently answering a claim made by his opponent.

"Of COURSE you are the King of Beers. We don't WANT to be the King of Beers. This is America. A Democracy. Miller Lite is the President of Beers."

In a print ad, the copy shows the Miller candidate saying "we don't kowtow to a bunch of tiara-wearing crumpet eaters."

To give credit where credit is due, the campaign for Miller comes from the agency of Wieden & Kennedy. It shows what can come about when a few guys sit around drinking beer thinking about these things.

Another thing Miller has thought about is carbs. Turns out Miller Lite has fewer carbs than Bud Lite. And so in print ads, Miller stresses the carb count, the implication being that if you have gotten fat, it could be because you've gone along with the King. Try Miller Lite.

Budweiser's unleashing of the dawgs is pretty nasty. In one print commercial, Budweiser shows a bottle of Bud Light all frosty and wet, and a bottle of Miller Lite that is not. It reiterates that it is the King of Beers, while declaring Miller Lite to be this sort of effeminate, namby-pamby "Queen of Carbs." Not only that, the copy says, but Miller is "South African Owned." Budweiser has been American owned since 1876.

On a big billboard in Chicago, Budweiser says, "All light beers are low in carbs. Choose on

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #300

Well, this is my 300th article so I decided I get to write anything I want. I have survived five editors and Dan. I tease about Dan being a taskmaster with a whip and a chair, but he's really a sweetheart, he hardly ever uses a chair. In 300 articles, he's only asked me to rewrite one. So I have no complaints. I remember reading Dan's Papers in high school when it was just a two page flyer we picked up at King Kullen's when we went off island to shop. It was written, illustrated, produced, printed, folded, stapled and distributed by Dan.

In all my articles, I guarantee 10% truth or 90% blarney, take your choice, except for one article that I wrote in 1998, Article #12 Dances with Clams, which is word for word true. This is my all time favorite, I hope you get a good laugh over your morning coffee. #12 Dances with Clams, revised and embellished with new and improved mollusks.

For many people, a bathing suit is just something you're almost wearing in front of strangers on a beach. For anyone raised on the water, it's a lot more than that. My grandfather was a bay clammer in Sayville. My happiest memories are being on the clam boat in the burning sun, culling clams and catching crabs. Lunch was clams on the half shell and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, with Yoohoo for the kids and Budweiser for the adults. No one knew about four basic food groups. We only had two food groups back then; what ever came out of the water and what ever came out of the kitchen.

From early childhood I learned that all bathing suits have a second purpose in life, that is to hold clams. I can still see my family, 20 feet from the boat, waist deep in water treading clams. My Aunt Carol's bathing suit could hold 2 pecks (1/2 bushel) of clams in addition to Aunt Carol. My grandfather opened clams and ate them while still standing in the clam bed. My grandmother and her sister Olive would be standing next to him to get their clams opened, too. Each wore a full coverage bathing suit that could hold 1 peck of clams, a bottle of beer between the boobs, a churchkey on a string around the neck, and a small bottle of Tabasco. They always did love lunch on the water.....

My Uncle Walter (by marriage) was a skinny lifeguard. He liked to wear a red Speedo. Useless in my family. Speedo's have a four clam limit, 2 in front, 2 in back (think of that visual). Eventually he switched to cut-offs. I will never forget the day he was about to dive in the water off the boat when my aunt suddenly yelled at him not to dive in while he was wearing the new watch she gave him. So he promptly took off the new watch, put it in the pocket of his cut-offs, and dived in the water....he never lived that one down.

My grandfather had the big, boxer style swim trunks – with pockets. He always wore a tee shirt in the water and tucked it into the trunks. He could put a peck of clams in the tee shirt and fit scungili (big conch snails) in his pockets. We cooked the scungili, cut them up and put them in spaghetti sauce. I

5TH ANNUAL SAG DERBY CONTESTED AT WOLFFER

The 5th Sagaponack Derby was another huge success, under cool but clear skies. The eight teams, with three riders each, took to Wolffer Estates Grand Prix Field. Derby creator and host Christian Wolffer rode his mount "Cassango" on the "Gruyere" team – all the teams were named after cheeses! In the most competitive Derby Round ever, the visiting riders from Venture, Inc. out of Carmel, N.Y., rode to a triple-double clear victory with the leadership of Darren Graziano. The individual Jump-Off consisted of nine riders, who all gave a thrilling derby "dead gallop" across the field to the finish! Federico Sztyrle rode "K.K" in the day's most blazing time clocked by officials.

Results:

Team Competition

First Place:
Darren Graziano – "Graphite"
Ariane Stiefler – "Calata"
Melissa Hogenburt – "Showtime"

Second Place:

taste."

Miller is firing back already.

"Thank you for bringing that up. Miller Lite tastes better than Bud Lite."

They are also running a print ad about the South African claim, which happens to be true. Miller's parent company was indeed sold to a South African firm with headquarters in London.

"American born since 1855 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, U. S. A." and "American brewed since 1855," the copy in the ad says now.

Years ago, the President of Miller Lite bought a rubber foot pad with a Budweiser logo on it. He used it under his desk to put his feet on.

Later that year, after Bud found out about it, they bought the side of a building across the street visible out the man's window. Put another Bud logo on that for him to see every day.

Meantime, this Saturday, Dan's Papers is holding the 27th annual 10k Potatohampton Minithon run through the potatofields of Sagaponack. This was a brilliant idea when it was thought up back in 1977 and it remains a brilliant idea. Be there to register before 9 am on the lawn in back of the Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church. The gun goes off at 9:30. A $25 entry fee makes you eligible for one of thirty six first, second or third prizes. And after the race, you can buy yourself a copy of Dan's Papers.

No. Wait a minute. Dan's Papers is free.

BREAKING NEWS

The village of North Haven has introduced a plan to curb the construction of oversized homes in its quaint neighborhoods. A mathematical formula has been employed that will calculate the square footage of the property and only allow a specific maximum ratio for the square footage of the building. Richard Warren is president of the Interscience Research Associates of Southampton, and he claims that the new plan will stimulate the building of varying architectural styles, while still keeping the size of the buildings in check. The overall maximum building size, regardless of property size, will be set at 15,000 square feet. There will be a public hearing to discuss the new rules on June 1, and board members predict that laws will be voted on that night.

never had spaghetti with meatballs until I had dinner in a restaurant. I still remember how strange it tasted to me.

My family and I still go treading clams in our favorite spot on Shelter Island whenever possible. We wait for low tide, pick a spot about waist deep and begin the Clam Dance. You wiggle your feet a few inches into the slimy mud and feel for clams with your toes. Experienced toes can tell a stone (smooth) from clam (ridged). Articulate toes can grip the clam and pass it up to your hand for deposit in your bathing suit. The first few clams pass virtually undetected to your crotch. Since you're in waist deep water, the buoyancy of the salt water keeps the crotch from sagging and the clams from escaping. When your suit is full, you have to negotiate you and your clams to the shore.

We wait for any cars to pass that might see us exit the water. The twenty pounds of mollusks shifting and banging together in your suit, draws the suit down lower and lower with each step out of the water. As soon as you're in knee-deep water you reach down to hold in the clams that are starting to fall out of your crotch. For people driving by who are from, say, Montana, this can be a frightening sight... Shelter Islanders only slow down enough to memorize the location of the clam bed!

On land, you tie closed the sleeves of all shirts, up-end the shirt to act as a sack and start reaching down into your suit for the clams. It's best to tread clams with your family as you will undoubtedly expose some personal parts of your body in the de-clamming process.

My little brother Brian once caught a flounder accidentally while dropping a clam in his trunks. Talk about fly fishing! My mother and I still have not recovered from the sight of a 6'3", 260 lb man emerging from the water, trunks weighed down with clams and a three pound live fish flopping around in the front of private parts as he hopped to shore. Our Shinnecock ancestors would have given him the same name we all did that day. He was and still is, Dances With Clams.....

NEW THIS YEAR

Sponsor a runner

Welcome to the 25th Annual Shelter Island Run.

It's hard to believe 25 years have passed since thatsweltering day in August of 1980 when Justin Gubbins and Burke Koncilek led 728 runners to the finish.

Thanks to thousands of runners and scores of sponsors,we have raised over $500,000 for charities on and off Shelter Island.

This year we welcome two great new charities:
The Timothy Hill Children's Ranch of Riverhead and East End Hospice out of Westhampton Beach.

The Ranch is in its 25th year of providing love, hope andprofessional counseling to at-risk boys in asafe, residential environment.

Hospice has assisted thousands of patients and their families during the most painful period of terminal illness.

Both organizations have served well and are shining stars in the business of caring for others. We are proud to have them with us this year.

WIN THE USE OF A NEW HONDA ELEMENT

Remember the random draws for the use of a Honda for one year where anyone finishing under an hour was eligible? Well, it's back!

Apple Honda/Garsten Motors is donating FREE USE of a classy, 2005 Honda Element FOR A FULL YEAR. Complete the course in under one hour and you will be automatically entered in a random draw at the awards ceremony. You MUST be present at the awards ceremony to win.

SECOND CHANCE TO WIN
FREE USE OF HONDA
Mr. Garsten has donated a second 2005 Element to help our two great charities.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

Each runner is invited to consider a $100 sponsorship over the entry fee. Sponsor yourself, or get another person, or company, to sponsor you. Businesses sponsoring five, or more, runners will be recognized on race day, according to their dollar level of sponsorship.

Raise as much sponsor money as you can.

Each registered runner who raises sponsor money will be entered in the second random draw for the second Apple Honda/Garsten Motors Honda Element.

You get one chance for each $100 you raise.

In addition, three prizes valued at $750, $500 and $250 each will be awarded to the three people, registered runner, or not, who raise the most sponsor money.

In the end, all money raised in sponsorship will be equally divided between the Ranch and Hospice. Send sponsor checks made out to, "Hospice/Ranch Fund" , to S.I.Run, P.O. Box 266, Shelter Island, N.Y.11964

Contact James Hill at (631) 369-1234 for details.

Whether you sponsor a runner, or not, we look forward to your participation in the 25th Annual Shelter Island Run on June 12th.

Dan's Papers Goes To... 5TH SAGAPONACK DERBY

Photos and Text by Suzy Orduna

Eight teams vied on the Wolffer Estate's Grand Prix Field. Christian Wolffer, up on Cassango, led the "Gruyere" team for the most competitive - 1:30 - Derby Round ever. Visitors from Venture, Inc. in Carmel, NY, rode to a triple, double clear victory under the leadership of Darren Graziano. The individual jump-off consisted of nine riders, demonstrating the thrill of a true Derby in a dead gallop across the field to the finish. Federico Sztyrle rode KK in the day's most blazing time, clocked by officials Neil and Mary O'Connor of Southampton. The great generosity and support from Brennan's Bit & Bridle and Horse Haven provided, along with Wolffer Estate wines, the prizes for the season's opening equestrian event. Derby results on page 91.

Dan's Papers Goes To... MOMENTS IN TIME

Lenox Hill Neighborhood House celebrated its 110th birthday with a sparkling black-tie gala, "Moments in Time," raising $725,000. Many Hamptonites contributed to the evening's success. Cocktails were served for 750 at The Seventh Regiment Armory to preview The 11th Annual International Fine Art Fair, one of the world's most prestigious fine art shows. The evening continued with an elegant dinner dance with 30 tables, each with an original table decoration, beautifully orchestrated by Design Chairs John Rosselli, Bunny Williams and Robert Rufino.

THE DRAMA DESK AWARDS

The 49th annual Drama Desk Awards presented by Robert R. Blume in association with TheatreMania.com was hosted by Harvey Fierstein, with Billy Stritch at the piano. Twenty-seven awards were handed out by Broadway stars including Sean Combs, Kristin Chenoweth, Idina Menzel, Alfred Molina, Bebe Neuwirth, Christopher Plummer and Leslie Uggams. Big winners were Wicked with six awards and Assasins with four. One of the evening's highlights was when Phylicia Rashad (A Raisin In The Sun) tied with Viola Davis (Intimate Apparel) for Outstanding Actress in a Play. The celebration continued into the wee hours of the morning at Compass Restaurant, a west side hot spot owned by Lewis and Lynn Pell of Westhampton. A special thank you to Randie Levine-Miller for her continuing efforts to raise the public's awareness of the Awards. What a grand evening to be a part of the theatre!

Rettangolo Full Diamond Timepiece – $285,000

This is a one-of-a-kind Rettangolo timepiece with 45 mm, 18k white gold case, embellished with 229 shimmering diamonds of exceptional quality, for an extraordinary total weight of 17.85 carats. Diamonds adorn the entire dial, including the hour indexes, as well as the crown and the buckle. An elegant black shiny alligator strap perfectly complements this spectacular watch. Swiss made, this timepiece is equipped with a quartz movement. Only three available in the world, a true luxury, Bvlgari will fly yours in especially for you...

Available at Bvlgari, 730 Fifth Avenue,
New York City. 1-212-315-9700.

Vintage Pendant – $1,680

A pendant fit for a queen! This magnificent vintage piece from Rajasthan, India, contains nine pink tourmalines and twenty-eight table cut diamonds set in the traditional Kundun (pure gold) setting. The back of the pendant has a fine example of the colorful, traditional Minakari enamel work that is celebrated in this region of India. The pendant is approximately sixteen inches in length, 1 3/4 inches in diameter and has a ruby bead dropped from the bottom. The piece is suspended on three strands of pearls, accented with ruby beads and closed with an 18kt gold clasp.

Available at Wall Street Bead & Jewelry Exchange, 14 Wall Street, Southampton. 631-283-6843.

El Gaucho Cosmetic Bag - $

Hold that train! Accessories are the personality you use to finalize any look you wear. The unisex El Gaucho Train Bag is made of Carpincho leather with a three inch signature textile and leather strap. There are exterior side zip-pockets, a 49 inch detachable shoulder strap with shoulder pad and sturdy five inch handles. Clinching straps with snap closures and a full zip-closure at the top of the bag with snaps for zipper end, make this an easy access accessory. The inside is multi-function pocket and zip lock with a cloth lined interior. The bag measures 23" L x 15" H x 10" W, available in brown (carpincho leather/signature textile) and black Bovine leather with a brown stripe. The matching cosmetics bag measures 7.5" L x 4.5"H x 2.5" W.

Available at El Gaucho Argentinean Handcrafts, 116 E. 66th Street, New York City. 1-212-351-2565. www.elgaucho.net and Koala, 130 Main Street, Westhampton Beach 631-288-0444. E-mail Ledjaji@aol.com

The legend of the bracelet dates back over 1200 years. It was believed that wearing the bracelet would protect against harm, sickness and misfortune. The four knots symbolize the powerful forces of life: the sun, wind, fire, and water. The African elephant hair bracelet is hand-made out of precious metals (18k, 14k, or sterling silver) to resemble the original bracelet that was woven out of elephant hair. Each handmade bracelet is unique and is hand engraved with Ledjaji hallmark (AEHB). Total weight of 36 diamonds is 1.44 kt. The matching necklace and earrings are available upon request. Silver and gold tone starts from $85–$170, solid 14kt gold from $480–$800. Phone orders are accepted after June 8.

Available at Ledjaji Jewelry, PO Box 894, Parker, Colorado. 303-883-8666, E-mail Ledjaji@aol.com

Phoenix – $10,500

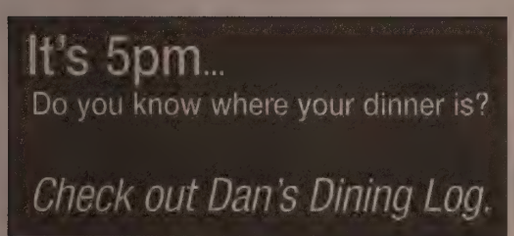

Tiffany & Co. pays tribute to one of its own and the world's most renowned designers, with "Joi de Vivre," a magnificent jewelry collection by Jean Schlumberger. His extraordinary Phoenix clip, with yellow and blue sapphires, emeralds, amethysts and diamonds in platinum and eighteen-karat gold, highlights the brilliant, unexpected color combinations and strong sculptural quality that captures movement and the sheer beauty of flight, signatures of Schlumberger's work. The collection includes extraordinary jewels that demonstrate Schlumberger's fascination with the mythical and colorful harmonies of gemstones. The exhibition will be on view from Friday, June 25, through Monday, July 26, at Tiffany & Co. in East Hampton.

Available at Tiffany & Co., 53 Main Street, East Hampton. 631-324-1700.

Hand Painted Vanity With Sink – $1,800

If you want something different in your home, this custom- made piece by Olde English Woods certainly fits the bill. It is a one-of-a-kind, elegant hardwood vanity, with the sink, that is handmade, using traditional joinery and construction. Every hand-painted vanity by this company is designed to feature a specific "American Lighthouse" that is complemented by images of recreational activities associated with the lighthouses' "hometown." This particular piece features the Montauk Lighthouse with images of bicycles, a boat on the beach and beach chairs and umbrellas.
Available at At Home en Provence, 65 Tuthill Road, Montauk. 631-668-4808.

Dreams Do Come True.....

...just ask our patients!

"I never dreamed it could look so good. People look at my teeth and become self-conscience of their own." R.K.

"You are truly an artist, in every sense of the word. I am most grateful for your gentleness and caring and the way you included me in every step of the process. Never once did I feel like just "another patient." Your practice is unlike any other dentist's office I've ever encountered." P.F.

My lifelong dream was always to have a beautiful bright smile. Now I can't seem to get the smile off my face. I believe that there is always a reason why people enter your life and I think you entering my life was to teach me to smile and feel confident, which you achieved with flying colors.Thank you for changing my life forever." C.P.

RELAX, IT'S ONLY A BUCK

TATE'S COFFEE, $1

Now you don't have to get angry every time you get your coffee fix in the morning. It's no secret that a tall frappalatté pochaccino costs just under four bucks, and regular deli coffee can be as much as a $1.50. Not here. We sell quality, fresh-brewed coffee for $1.00. Simple as that. No funny names or gimmicks or mentioning the bean-roast from the highlands of someplace exotic. Just straight quality. Stop by, have a coffee and one of our famous cookies, muffins, or pastries. But if you're a penny pincher, (and lovin' the coffee for a buck), don't go hungry – help yourself to some complimentary cookie crumble. So, if what you want is some quality coffee and something to snack on, come to Tate's. Open at 8 every day.

The Pride Of McBride: Ready For Another Season On Oregon Road

The McBride Family has farmed for generations on beautiful Oregon Road in Cutchogue, one of Long Island's last rural frontiers. Growers of potatoes, sweet corn and rye, it is farming families like the McBrides that keep the land in agricultural production and free of development. By shopping at our local farmstands and wineries whenever possible, you cast a vote for open space here on the North Fork. And in a world that seems to grow smaller every day, open space is indeed becoming our most precious commodity.

Artist Of The Week: Photographer Steve Berger

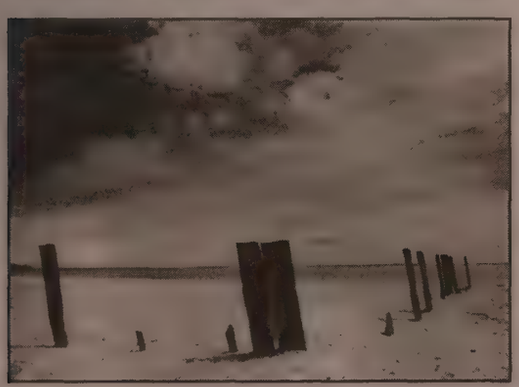

Nature's Theatre Captured In Black And White

Steven Berger, born in Atlantic City during the 1940s, was introduced to the North Fork in 1988 by his wife, Ellen. Since then, he has spent the last decade capturing images on film of his adopted home, printing and mounting the results in his workshop/darkroom in Jamesport.

"The quality of light here enhances scenery that is almost too wonderful to be free for the gazing," says Steve of the North Fork. "The main visual attraction for me here is the sky. Most days it is either vibrant blue or filled with spectacular cloud formations that reflect all of the moods one can experience or imagine. The stage backdrops of the New York theatre pale when compared to the settings God creates in the North Fork sky."

Steve Berger's work has received recognition and awards from various local venues, including East Hampton's Guild Hall Member's Exhibit. Steve's work is available at Cecily's Love Lane Gallery in Mattituck (298-8610) and at Blue Door Gallery in Riverhead (208-8166), or visit his website at www.stevebergerphotography.com

"Spring Pilings: Again the sky had character and the beach appeared to have renewed itself for the new season."

"North Fork Farm: This was the summation of the things I love about the light and scenery out here that keeps me from ever having to go anywhere else for material."

"My First Sailboat: Little people everywhere will be heading to the beach. Some to swim, some to sail."

Big Event of the Week

Memorial Day Weekend, 2004

Arlington National Cemetery

Memorial Day is much more than a three-day weekend that marks the beginning of summer. To many people, especially the nation's thousands of veterans, it is an important reminder of those who died in the service of their country.

Memorial Day was first widely observed on May 30, 1868, to commemorate the sacrifices of Civil War soldiers.

In 1966, the federal government, under the direction of President Lyndon Johnson, declared Waterloo, New York, the official birthplace of Memorial Day. They chose Waterloo, which had first celebrated the day on May 5, 1866, because the town had made Memorial Day an annual, community-wide event during which businesses closed and residents decorated the graves of soldiers with flowers. Today, Memorial Day is celebrated at Arlington National Cemetery with a ceremony in which a small American flag is placed on each grave. The current president or vice-president also often gives a speech honoring and lays a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. About 5,000 people attend the ceremony at Arlington each year.

This week, Greenport commemorates Memorial Day with a carnival, sponsored by Greenport Fire Department Star Hose Company No. 3, Wednesday, May 26 through Sunday, May 30 at the Polo Grounds. A fireworks display is also planned for Saturday night (rain date: Sunday) at 10 p.m. And on Monday, May 31, the annual Southold Town Memorial Day parade will begin in Greenport at 10 a.m.

RESTAURANT AT THE WOODS

From the NY Times, Mrs. JoAnne Starkey says:
"Mr. Guy Peuch's crab cakes are legendary, perhaps the best on Long Island."

From Newsday, Mr. Peter Gianotti says:
"It's easily the most impressive restauant to open in Riverhead since potatoes began giving way to grapes! Excellent main course; pork chop finishes with nubbins of garlic and sage. Also first rate, the Niman Ranch dry-rubbed rib steak. Top desserts: lemon tart, tart tatin and chocolate-hazelnut puck."

From Dan's Papers, Mr. Roy Bradbrook says:
"Probably the best lobster bisque we have ever tasted; pate with pistachio and truffles was superb, vibrant duck a l'orange with some incredible wild rice, impressive desserts. Guy Feuch is among the very top tier chefs in this region."

Mesclun, Mizuna, And Much More At Sang Lee Farms

North Fork Grower Specializing In Asian Greens Dazzles Those Looking For Something Different

By Loraine Page

If they bottled the enthusiasm of their customers, as they do dressings for their salad makings, the proprietors of Sang Lee Farms in Peconic could earn a fortune.

"I don't know what I'm here to buy!" chirped Millie Reilly of Southold on a recent weekday as she looked around at the colorful salad makings, bottled dressings, potted herbs, and flowers that are on display at this renowned specialty produce market. "Everything looks so good."

Reilly was inspired to shop here after attending a salad-making demonstration given by Karen Lee, who owns the farm with her husband Fred.

Another customer, Justine Gilvarry of Southold, attended the same demonstration, which was held recently at the Southold Library as one of a three-part cooking series. Gilvarry was delighted to be introduced to new tastes.

"You should come to one!" she gushed. "I ate flowers for the first time. Pansies, and some yellow flowers."

Karen Lee smiled while listening. "I always love it when I see people get excited like that," she said. "Sometimes I forget how unusual our produce is and how little people have been exposed to this kind of eating. When I do a class like that it reminds me how much more I need to get the word out there. Because what we have is really so excellent."

Greens – baby greens — are the mainstay at Sang Lee Farms. Customers can purchase mesclun, a French word for mixture, that contains from 12 to 16 different types of young greens.

Karen Lee surrounded by her excellent farm products

"We put up to 16 different greens in our mesclun mix," said Lee. "Twelve is the absolute minimum. The mesclun mixes that you see in the supermarkets may have only 6 or 8 lettuces. We add Asian greens like tatsoi and snow pea shoots and mizuna, which is a Japanese lettuce. I also put tungho in there – that's an edible chrysanthemum. And I put in baby spinach, baby arugula, mustard, baby kale — a Red Russian kale, which is a wonderful salad variety."

Mesclun has come into favor in the past few years as people veered away from nutritionally-challenged iceberg lettuce and toward the vitamin-packed darker greens. Karen Lee agrees that health is one reason people are drawn to Sang Lee Farms' products.

"The people who come to us are definitely interested in nutrition and flavor," said Lee, "and they are very excited when they can get both. It's not true that you have to sacrifice flavor to get nutrition. It's really the opposite."

Because Lee feels that traditional dressings can weigh down the baby greens used in her mixtures, she developed and sells her own light dressings. They are: Asian Vinaigrette, Special Citrus, Toasted Sesame, and Scallion.

"The citrus and the sesame are the lightest," she said. "They are a blend of fruit juices and our herbs and contain no vinegar at all. They dress the salad without competing with the flavors of the greens."

About 98 percent of the produce sold at Sang Lee Farms is grown there. Freshness – what you buy was cut the same day – and a natural-based growing process (compost and organically approved sprays to control insects) contribute to the superior taste of the vegetables. In fact, it was this dedication to excellence that caught the attention of Martha Stewart, who featured Fred and Karen Lee on her television show about five years ago.

"Fred talked about the wholesale products that we were selling," Lee recalled, "because at that time we were still doing a lot of wholesaling, and I made a potted salad arrangement. And Martha featured one of my recipes for a Cole slaw using an Asian cabbage."

Sang Lee Farms has shifted its focus toward the retail market now (after 50 years of the Lee family catering to the Asian wholesale market) and offers 250 varieties of produce or produce-based products ranging from Stir-Fry Combo Packs to containers of freshly made pesto.

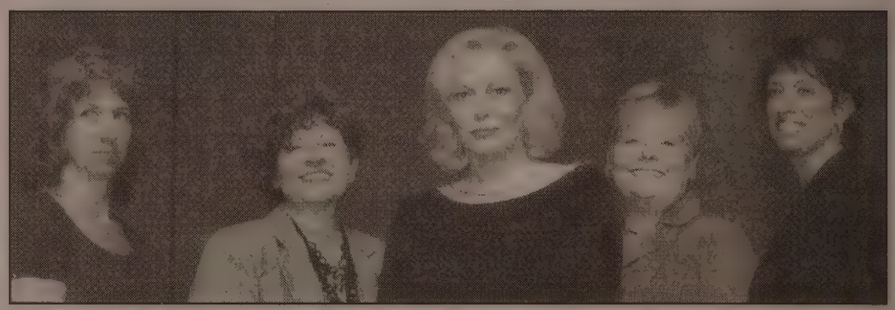

Karen Lee says that she and her husband, who is the main grower, have more plans for expansion. In addition to continuing to offer Mesclun by Mail, which gets packages of mesclun out to customers throughout the United States from October 1 through May 1, they hope to introduce Salad of the Month, in which participants will receive a different salad plus dressing for each month of the year.

In the meantime, Karen Lee will continue to get the word out about her produce by hosting more cooking demonstrations at both public places and in people's homes and by holding food festivals at Sang Lee Farms.

Sang Lee Farms is located on the south side of Route 48 (the North Road) in Peconic. For information about upcoming events at the farm or for directions, visit the website www.sangleefarms.com For more information call 734-7001.

THE 2ND ANNUAL "TEENY AWARDS"

June 6, Westhampton Beach

The East End Arts Council of Riverhead and the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center announced the nominees of the Second Annual "Teeny Awards" on May 4 at the WHBPAC in Westhampton Beach.

The Teeny Awards are a cooperative effort of EEAC and WHBPAC. They are modeled after the Tony Awards, celebrating and rewarding the talented youth of the East End, as well as stimulating local interest and support of high school theatre departments. Celebrity supporters of the Teeny Awards include playwright Joe Pintauro, Sesame Street's Bob McGrath, actor Roy Scheider, actress Karen Sillas, playwright Henry David Hwang (M Butterfly), and Ilene Kristin of "One Life to Live."

A panel of judges with extensive theatre experience reviews participating East End high school productions during the current school year. Nominees are selected in approximately 20 categories, including best actors and actresses and best supporting roles in comedy, musical, and drama, as well as for student-produced set design, choreography, and lighting.

"I fully support the Teeny Awards and am delighted that recognition is being given to our talented high school students," said actor and Teeny Awards supporter Roy Scheider.

A formal invitation-only awards ceremony is scheduled for Sunday June 6 to be held at the WHBPAC, with guest presenters including Oscar-nominee Cathy Moriarty-Gentile, Tony Award-winner Peg Murray, author/playwright Lee Davis, and Dan's Papers publisher/editor-in-chief Dan Rattiner. With support from the East End business community, award winners will receive trophies and scholarships. (Attendance at the ceremony is by invitation only. The names of the winners from North Fork schools will be posted in the June 11 issue of Dan's Papers in the Dan's North Fork section.)

Ready, Set, Eat! New North Fork Chefs Heat Up Summer

By Roy Bradbrook

This is the time of year when changes in restaurants and chefs tend to be in the news as everyone gets ready for the onslaught of diners as the summer season gets under way on the East End.

In this article we profile two extremes, a new restaurant with a brand new owner/chef setting out to make her mark, and a very well-established and respected restaurant where a new chef has just taken over the kitchens.

New to Greenport is the aptly named "Scrimshaw" with its whaling connotations, although whale is not expected to appear on the menu that owner and executive chef Rosa Ross will be featuring. Rosa has a cosmopolitan background that stretches from her upbringing in Hong Kong to living in Italy and other parts of Europe before she came to New York to teach catering and also to become a culinary consultant. Rosa has owned a house here out east for some years and the opportunity to open a restaurant on Preston's Dock in Greenport was an opportunity for her to live and work full time in the area she has grown to love. Much as she loves being in the kitchen, logistics dictate that chef Jeremy Griffiths, who arrived here from the UK via cooking spells at Park Bistro, the Stanhope Hotel and Il Buco in Manhattan, will mainly be responsible for the kitchen while the restaurant is open, leaving Rosa to look after the front of the house duties.

Chef Rosa Ross of Scrimshaw, Greenport's newest eatery

Executive Chef Matthew Lewis and Sous Chef John Scunziano of The Seafood Barge in Southold

Simply stated, Rosa's business philosophy is "caring about what we do and we never, ever cut corners." It is also about good cooking featuring the best of ingredients, local wherever possible, with a blend of ethnicities from Asian to Italian to English to American. So look for a salmon curry on Thai black rice as well as English-style fish and chips or rack of lamb.

Scrimshaw (477-8882) is currently open for dinner Thursday through Sunday. After Memorial Day Weekend, the restaurant will serve lunch and dinner, Wednesday through Sunday.

While Scrimshaw is brand new, The Seafood Barge in Southold already has built a stellar reputation as one, if not the best, of the seafood restaurants on Long Island. Owner Dick Ehrlich and his staff are by now well used to ensuring that, even on the busiest of weekends in the heart of the summer, when they may serve 600 or more diners, every plate is treated as though it is the only plate of the night. So any new chef is immediately likely to feel the pressure and responsibility that goes with that position.

With the recent departure of chef Michael Meehan, executive chef Matthew L. Lewis and sous chef John Scunziano are the new team at The Seafood Barge. Matt was born in Southampton and became intrigued with food at an early age when, living in Georgia, his grandfather introduced him to such delicacies as oysters. Matt trained at the New England Culinary Institute in Montpelier, Vermont, and at the N.Y.I.T. and still hones his skills with courses at the American Culinary Federation. His first post was at T&M

A Real GEM Of An Idea

The E-Car: Island Entrepreneur Goes Green Renting Electric Passenger Vehicles

By Michele Sullivan

Whether you make a day trip or stay for a week, there's much to enjoy on Shelter Island. The Island enjoys a quiet, relaxing environment where one can tour for antiques, venture out on a kayak, observe the ospreys, or simply relax on the beach. But whatever you decide to do while visiting Shelter Island, one thing is for sure – your visit can be made more pleasurable by the latest little "GEM" that is being offered.

The latest phenomenon for both Island tourists and locals is Electric Glide Car Rentals, which rents GEM (Global Electric Motors) cars. These quiet, emission-free vehicles can be spotted at various points around the Island, however, one can find his or her own at North Ferry Road where you will be greeted by the gracious Shelter Islander Bob Drake, owner of Electric Glide.

Electric Glide opened its door to business last July and is looking forward to another successful season. Bob Drake has worked for ten years with the technical and management systems involved with electric cars. It is a passion that is fueled by the goal of preserving the environment. Within the country, there are only five other locations that have electric cars, and Shelter Island is the only area in the Northeast (aside from Riverhead, which markets to golf courses). There are twenty vehicles on site available in both two and four passenger capacity. A new venture that Bob is looking forward to is the sale of GEM cars for locals. "It makes sense for Shelter Island – a controlled environment with a low speed limit," said Bob.

Bob Drake's wife, Andrea, a teacher at the Hampton Day School, gets ready to "motor" at the North Ferry

What exactly is a GEM car? About two years ago, Chrysler manufactured an electric car that was certified to be on the road. Created with high standards, the GEM is the environmentally friendly choice for mode of personal transport. Bob Drake researched the use of GEM cars in such places as Panama City, Florida and Key West. When he recognized their success in those areas, he knew that they would be right for Shelter Island.

New York State Motor Vehicle laws permit GEMs as limited use vehicles. The cars reach 25 miles per hour and can be driven on roads that do not exceed a 35 miles per hour speed limit. They are created with a charger on board that can simply be plugged into any outlet. There is no need for any special infrastructure to maintain the vehicles. One charge will set one off with a twenty-five mile range of adventure. As a "zero-emission vehicle," there is essentially no pollution created from the use of these cars. The summer season is usually the source of great traffic on the Island. GEM cars help cut back on this pollution which helps to maintain the natural beauty of Shelter Island.

Each car takes approximately six to eight hours to charge, but improvements are being made in that area as well. Bob Drake and his company have recently received a grant from the Clean Cities Program which will be used to create three fast-charging systems that will be open to the public. The company will work with the town's cooperation to create these sites where the electric cars can be charged within the convenience of an hour. Along with the twenty cars in the rental car facility, there are also approximately ten privately owned Ribs in Eastport (by coincidence, back in the late 80s, the first place in the U.S. where I learned to really appreciate ribs). Later, Matt cooked at 75 Main and opened George Martin, both in Southampton. Immediately before coming to The Seafood Barge he was food & beverage director and executive chef at the new Hilton Hotel in Islip.

It was at the Hilton that John met Matt and decided to join him as sous chef at The Seafood Barge. Matt admits that he is still feeling out exactly what patrons of the restaurants are most likely to enjoy and he has changed his menus several times already. The current menu offers some interesting dishes, such an appetizer of lobster and spinach spring rolls with a pineapple plum compote. Matt stressed that he is committed to using only the finest and freshest produce and is concentrating on local suppliers to the maximum.

Crab cakes are another of his signature dishes and these paired with a steak in a "steak and cake" combination are proving to be keen favorites already. Matt's philosophy is that even on the busiest of days you are only as good as the last plate sent out of the kitchen.

Dick Ehrlich brought sushi to The Seafood Barge some years ago and now the restaurant has a wonderful reputation for sushi. Matt is a major proponent of sushi and he is delighted that Tommy the sushi chef has stayed on with him. They plan even wider selections of this delicacy, so fans should stop by to what's new.

The Seafood Barge ((765-3010) is open for lunch and dinner daily.

As we enjoy our meals in any of the increasingly wide selection of restaurants that now call the North Fork home, we should all give a heartfelt thanks for all the chefs such as Rosa, Matt and John whose main aim in life is to send us out into the outside world replete and satisfied. Benjamin Franklin enjoined people "not to eat to dullness." So enjoy the work of the chefs in all its aspects, from the way that a dish is created to the visual appeal of its presentation. And again, as you eat and enjoy, remember to give thanks for the bounty of both the land and oceans around us.

Editor's note: You can arrive by boat to dine at either of the above restaurants. Call The Seafood Barge at the number above for specifics. For Scrimshaw, look for a sign that says Preston's Dock. You can tie up there.

The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Dining Destinations

What's Cookin'

'Tis the time of year when we anxiously start scouting out our favorite farmstands for signs of summer. Horseradish, asparagus, and rhubarb herald the season as arugula, lettuces and over-wintering spinach follow on their heels.

While this process never fails to excite even dormant culinary instincts, perhaps those who get the most inspired are our local chefs. After a long winter hoping for freshness to arrive from around the globe, these masters of the range look ravenously forward to slicing and dicing the best the East End has to offer. And while the lushness of our mid-summer is indeed incomparable, it's always the sweet beginning that stirs us most.

The lovingly preserved bar was rescued from the bowery in 1885. You're truly drinking in history when enjoying a famed martini there. New chef Michael Ruggiero cleverly traces the restaurant's history. He's not only maintained Claudio's time-honored favorites, but his specials reflect founder Manuel Claudio's Portugese and Mediterranean ancestry. And if you like your oysters raw, sea-fresh and plump, you'll do no better from here to Chesapeake Bay. 111 Main St., Greenport. 477-0627. Entrees, $17-$26. (Bradbrook, 7/25/03).

The Clubhouse at Indian Island. Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95.(Bradbrook, 4/16/04.)

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [Br,D]

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03). {Pu}.

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01). [G]

Ile de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs' legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02). [C,H,J]

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

La Plage. A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef / proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime / sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crème brulee.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook,2/04). [Ap,Ch]

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage

Last season Bob noted that visiting boaters constituted 40 percent of the renters. (Electric Glide has been featured in both Boating Magazine and the Embassy Guide.) It makes sense that if one arrives by water, transportation will be needed to tour the island. The GEM offers the perfect solution. Boaters can use them to catch the sights, enjoy a quick lunch, and do a bit of shopping. At the end of the day, the GEM can simply be

The use of Bob's Electric Glide cars is a smart choice. They are reliable, comfortable, environmentally wise, and best of all – fun! Enjoy your stay on Shelter Island. You can take in a game of golf, visit the art galleries, eat, shop, and go to the beach. But don't forget to make the decision to choose electric. very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02). [T]

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef /owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brulee and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03). [D]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [SF]

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03). {A,Cu,Ser,Spe,W}

Ile de Beaute, a touch of Provence in Greenport

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck a l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).{Lu,N}

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L,O]

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppresata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01). [C,I,P]

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London. Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03). [St].

The Tasting Room Celebrates Its First Year

Exactly a year ago in Dan's Papers Wine Guide I wrote about a new tasting room that had just opened in Peconic. A multi-winery tasting facility, the first of its kind in our wine region, was the brainstorm of Robin and Karen Meredith of Broadfields Wine Cellars in Southold. Called simply The Tasting Room, it features, in addition to Broadfields wines, vintages from Sherwood House, Schneider Vineyards, and Comtesse Thérèse, all of which, for varying reasons, lack their own tasting rooms.

Fast forward to Memorial Day 2004. The concept has been such a success that Robin is planning to open another Tasting Room in the Aquebogue/Jamesport area. They will also be adding some new boutique wineries to their roster of participants, and hope to open the new location by mid-July.

As a result of this expansion, Robin has hired a new manager, Bill Kovacsik, for the Peconic location. Bill is very personable and brings lots of knowledge and experience to the job, having worked for several local wineries as well as an upscale wine store in Nassau County.

The Tasting Room currently has a number of new releases available. Look for reviews of these wines in my column By The Glass in the North Fork section of Dan's Papers in the future.

Broadfields Wine Cellars is also launching a new series of negociant wines under the label "The Tasting Room." First releases in this series will include a 2002 single-vineyard Pinot Noir, a stainless-steel fermented Chardonnay from the 2003 vintage, and a bone-dry, 100 percent Cabernet Franc Rose, also from the 2003 vintage. All three wines will be released in June 2004 and will be available exclusively at The Tasting Room and through selected restaurants.

The Tasting Room is located at 2885 Peconic Lane in Peconic. Call 765-6404.

Scrimshaw Restaurant

Preston's Dock
(at the end of Main St.) Greenport
631-477-8882

By Susan Whitney Simm

With the waves of Greenport Harbor lapping literally at its feet, this sophisticated North Fork newcomer nods to the whaling village's history with its seafaring name, Scrimshaw. And like the American folk art of etching many different scenes into ivory, this restaurant offers a wide variety of tastes on its eclectic menu, clearly the result of the global culinary experiences of co-owner and chef Rosa Ross.

Perched over the water on Preston's Dock, the restaurant occupies a space formerly used as a gift shop and art gallery. The dining room is rather Spartan with its gray walls and white trim, but the windows provide such a dazzling view over the harbor to Shelter Island that artwork would seem redundant. The wide plank floors are appropriately uneven, giving one the slight sensation of walking on an old dock, and up a slight ramp to the left an inviting bar looks out on a yacht yard where ferries are hauled up and painted. That bar would be a great spot to enjoy a gin and tonic on a summer's evening at sunset.

Chef Ross' international life began in her native Hong Kong, a cosmopolitan, multi-cultural city with many culinary influences. She later lived in Macao, a Portuguese colony that is the oldest European settlement in the Far East, before marrying and moving to Italy where she met cookbook author and TV personality Marcella Hazan, who still refers to Ross as "her first student." Finally landing here in Manhattan, Ross taught at Peter Kump's cooking school and started a catering business before moving out east full time to run Scrimshaw. In light of these experiences, it should come as no surprise to find many international influences on her menu.

On a recent visit to Scrimshaw, we were greeted warmly at the door by an attentive staff. The dining room is long and narrow and tables are spaced to optimize seating capacity, so a little maneuvering is necessary when it is full of diners and you are led to a distant table along the wall. But this spacing also creates a welcome intimacy – you immediately feel a part of the scene. Halogen track lighting gives the room a sophisticated snap, and distant music from the bar allows normal conversation. It is easy, over cocktails, to sink into a reverie while watching the ferries ply the harbor, though I personally would dim the lights just a touch to enhance the mood.

We began with the Scrimshaw chowder, a hearty, milk-based soup redolent of white fish and vegetables such as leeks and potatoes. It is delicious, and will vary slightly during the season depending on what fish are locally available. (As all East End chefs tend to pride themselves on these days, Ross is no different when it comes to strongly emphasizing local produce and seafood.) We also sampled the trio of dumplings, which combined pork and chicken with mustard greens and tofu and were lightly steamed and served with a flavorful dipping sauce. But the standout was the spring roll made with duck confit. Though deep fried it was crisp and light, without being greasy, and the orange-cranberry chutney that accompanied it was excellent.

Scrimshaw currently offers four salads, several featuring the local produce of Satur Farms of Cutchogue. We tried the roasted beet and lentil, tossed in a lively vinaigrette full of herbs. It was nicely matched with a glass of Lieb Cellars' Pinot Blanc.

At entrée time we were treated to a tasting of four dishes, the best way to illustrate the diverse flavors available here. Tops on the list were the seafood in kaffir lime coconut broth and the tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto. The seafood dish was a perfect example of comfort food, proving that you don't need heavy meat and potatoes or pastas to fulfill those cravings. The broth, which gave the rice the creamy texture of risotto, was slightly sweet and tangy from the lime, and the shell and finfish were just-caught fresh. The lamb shanks were also superb, their feisty tamarind seasoning enhancing rather then detracting from the flavor of the tender meat. (Note: the lamb shank has currently been replaced with rack of lamb, which I have not tried but have heard positive feedback on.)

The aged spice rubbed strip steak is also recommended, and though the portion may not satisfy a hearty appetite, it is well priced for the East End at $28. The accompanying frites were crisp and tasty, especially when dunked in the accompanying onion jam. We tried the steamed leaf-wrapped sea bass in lieu of the grilled rare tuna, as it seemed a little more innovative. The fish was moist and fresh, and well suited to its plate mate of tomato and pepper coulis.

With the entrees we sampled three red wines: Bedell Cellars' Merlot 2000, Sterling Vineyards Cabernet Sauvignon 2001 (Napa) and Chandon Pinot Noir Carneros 2001 (Napa). The Bedell Merlot, with it dark fruit and soft tannins, was perfect with the lamb, and the perfumey, aromatic Chandon Pinot was excellent with the spicy steak. The only disappointment was the Sterling Cab Sauvignon, which we found lacking in body.

Desserts are far from run-of-the-mill, with bourbon bread pudding with bourbon crème anglais and warm Valhrona chocolate cake with brown sugar whipped cream taking honors. Two very good dessert wines, from Paumanok Vineyards in Aquebogue, are offered by the glass: the 2002 Late Harvest Riesling ($9) and the 2002 Late Harvest Sauvignon Blanc ($12). Macari Vineyard's 2002 Block 'E' Ice Wine is also available for $40 a bottle.

The wine list features a number of local bottles, most notably Comtesse Therese Merlot 2001 (half bottle, $15), Raphael Reserve Merlot 2000 ($60), Lieb Cellars Pinot Blanc 2002 ($26) and Paumanok's Chenin Blanc 2003 ($26).

Service was very attentive and friendly on the night of our visit, though I was told by a young friend that, when dining there in the restaurant's first weeks, her party had been told that they had to leave because their table was needed, even though they were still waiting for their check! I'm sure this policy has been straightened out since. It would be a shame for a restaurant in such a wonderful location with food to match to be spoiled by unprofessional behavior. If Rosa Ross runs the dining room like she does her kitchen, there is no doubt that Scrimshaw will be a resounding success.

Long Island's Newest Vineyard Breaks Ground In Aquebogue

Standing amid five freshly planted acres of premium Bordeaux clones, the owners and principals of Belle Brittany Vineyards conducted a ground-breaking ceremony on Saturday, May 22, followed by a reception at the adjacent Long Island National Golf Club. The project, spearheaded by young entrepreneurs Christopher and Alex Barnet (sons of Olde Vine Golf Club developer Bruce Barnet), is the only one of its kind on the East Coast. They plan to plant up to 20 acres of grapes and to focus on producing small batches of premium red wine. But what makes this venture unique is that the wine will be made exclusively for members of a new club, the Premier Cru Society, which is similar to a country club. Except instead of playing golf or tennis, members will take part in making the reserve wine from grapes grown on their vineyard.

Bill Kovacsik, new manager at The Tasting Room in Peconic

Reed Jarvis of Pindar Vineyards is onboard as vineyard manager,and Mark Frizolowski (former Pindar winemaker) of Childress Vineyards in California has joined as consulting winemaker. Guests in attendance last Saturday included Assemblywoman Pat Acampora, Joseph Gergela of the LI Farm Bureau, and Louisa Hargrave. Attendees were treated to a tasting of Belle Brittany Merlot as well as wines from five local producers.

Peconic Bay Winery Releases 2003 Riesling

This was an outstanding year for Riesling, and Peconic Bay's winemaker Greg Gove has proven that he is a master of that German variety. The complexity achieved in this white wine is formidable and its appetite-whetting acidity is bracing. Nice aromas of pear and grapefruit. But don't serve this wine icy cold, many of the lovely nuances will be lost. This wine was fermented in the "Sussreserve" style, which means that a small portion of sweet unfermented juice was held aside during harvest and added back after the rest of the wine underwent fermentation. As a result, the subtle sweetness in the wine comes from natural sugars of the grape as opposed to added sugars. Available at Peconic Bay Winery on the Main Road in Cutchogue (734-7361) for $12.99.

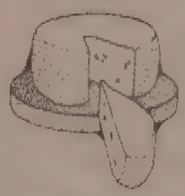

Highly recommended.

Happy Memorial Day. But don't forget to honor those who lost their lives defending our country. Cheers.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

"EAST END ART NOW" AT THE PARRISH

The current show at Southampton's Parrish Museum is significant for several reasons, one being that it is focusing on local artists. This was not necessarily true in the past, and this perception was the source of continuing criticism aimed at the Museum's mission.

"Storm at Sunset," by April Gornik

The idea that the exhibition features internationally-known people who live and work in the area may be seen initially as an ambiguous approach, giving credence to celebrity first and foremost. Whether such an issue exists is perhaps beside the point. The fact remains that appreciation for our region and its effect on contemporary art is a worthy pursuit and certainly a valuable educational goal of any museum.

The challenges of such an objective could be huge, considering the choices which must be made. Yet the selection process makes sense. It is consistent: pieces are both recent and represent signature endeavors. We can't imagine what it would be like if a particular artist was currently creating entirely different works. In a nutshell, the art is recognizable and identifiable; there are no surprises for those familiar with the artists' oeuvres.

Except in one remarkable case: Ibram Lassaw's projection paintings (which were originally done in the late 1940s and only recently digitalized by his daughter). If we know enough about Mr. Lassaw's themes and style, we would find a connection to his signifying sculpture, but the fact that we discover another dimension in the exhibited paintings is not only surprising but exciting.

Tony Oursler's sculpture hanging above the Museum's entrance is another discovery for those not familiar with the artist's work. His unique pieces, however, need a different kind of space than is afforded at at the Parrish.

Simply put, the show garners appreciation and respect for the artists; there's reinforcement of what we like and don't like about these noteworthy individuals. But there's little discovery about the work or their creators per se.

There is, however, revelation about the nature of art, at least this art. It's the idea that many works convey the idea of suspension: Donald Lipski's "Good as Gold," a circle of books dangling in mid-air; Alan Shield's "Internal Affairs Around the Box," a confluence of wired shapes suggesting a suspended altered state; Connie Fox's "Three Hats and a Glove," stream-of-conscious imagery hanging as if in her psyche, ready to be organized.

Now that's discovery.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

"East End Art Now" will be on view at the Parrish Museum until July 18.

Honoring the Artist: Peter Bell

While a lot of our cover artists have had diverse professions throughout their careers, none quite beats this week's artist, Peter Bell. For thirty-six years, Mr. Bell was a longshoreman, working the docks in both Brooklyn and New Jersey.

Since retiring to Cutchogue in 1996, he has been painting pictures of local scenes, including the cover piece which features Southold's American Legion Post, decked out with an American flag. Considering his subject matter, we might assume that Mr. Bell is a veteran, but that is not the case.

Although he holds a special affection for people who defend our county, Mr. Bell was never a member of the Armed Services, deciding instead to join the Merchant Marines. This makes perfect sense, given that his family has had a long relationship with ships: his father was a chef on the Holland America Lines; various relatives would regale the young Mr.Bell with tales from their own experiences as Merchant Marines.

It's not surprising that Mr. Bell's love of the sea led to his becoming a longshoreman, a profession he also clearly loved and respected. "If I had to choose a job all over again, I would still want to be a longshoreman. I can't think of any other profession I'd rather do," he says with enthusiasm.

What is somewhat surprising, however, is how Mr. Bell used his spare time pursuing subjects not usually associated with working on the docks: he got a B.A. in anthropology and a law degree from Brooklyn College of Law. "It was hard. I would work during the day and go to law school at night," Mr. Bell explains. "Study of anthropology helped me understand all the various people I worked with. I was also able to help with some Union matters, with arbitration problems, for example."

Mr. Bell is too modest to say he was responsible for helping change other things on the dock, namely organizing a school which taught women skills necessary to be longshoremen - oops, we mean longshorepersons. "Let's face it, the Union didn't want females, but some women we trained are still working, driving container carriers in the yards."

We ask a lot about such equipment, about containers and cargo and about how the unloading and loading of ships are now automated. We also inquire about our favorite film, On the Waterfront, and how realistic it was.

"It wasn't that realistic," Mr. Bell answers quickly. "No one person like Marlon Brando could rid the docks of corruption. And when Eva Marie Saint was in the ship's hole, how did she get there? Priests were more respected than the one in the movie, too."

Did Mr. Brando ever know how Mr. Bell felt, we asked teasingly. "As a matter of fact, I did once run into him and said I respected him a lot for his support of the American Indians. When I said he was way off with On the Waterfront, however, he just gave me a blank look and walked off."

It's apparent that Mr. Bell has some strong opinions, and he continues to paint strong images as well: starting in the late 1960s when he was recuperating from an illness, to a few days ago when he just finished a picture of the Blood Bank near Manhattan's City Hall. (There were several years in between when he didn't paint at all, however.)

We can't help but wonder what Mr. Bell's next painting will be.

Whatever it is, we can be sure it will be a surprise.

theatre review: a raisin in the sun...by Jan Silver

The Playbill cover for this show is a picture of Lorraine Hansberry, the author of this landmark play. Much of African Americans' experience—past, present and future—is embodied in this play. The subject had never been dramatized onstage before Hansberry wrote this in the 1950s, while in her twenties. With the exception of a little melodrama in the second act, Raisin is still as powerful and contemporary as if written yesterday.

The story takes place in the 1950s Younger household on Chicago's Southside, a poor neighborhood. The family consists of the widowed matriarch Lena (Phylicia Rashad), her son Walter Lee (Sean Combs), his wife Ruth (Audra McDonald), their son Travis (Alexander Mitchell), and Lena's college-attending daughter Beneatha (Sanaa Lathan). All five work hard and have different dreams of a better life.

Phylicia Rashad is galvanizing as Lena from the moment she steps onstage. Lena, a moral, dignified woman about to receive her husband's $10,000 life insurance, is in a quandary whether to buy a decent home for her family, put the money toward her daughter's medical school education or help Walter Lee start a business.

Ms. Rashad's words, gestures, and soulful eyes convey Lena's life of hard work, morality, and churchgoing respect. Her Lena is well aware of her late husband's shortcomings, but "seems like God didn't see fit to give the black man nothin' but dreams—but He did give us children to make them dreams seem worthwhile."

Sean Combs, better known as the rap artist/record producer/menswear designer P. Diddy, makes his Broadway debut as Walter Lee Younger. This is an actor's dream role, filled with strong emotions – anger, love, jealousy, bitterness. Sidney Poitier originated this role on Broadway in 1959 and in the 1961 movie, and it made him a star. Mr. Combs plays well physically against his outstanding co-actors in this production, but, at the mid-run performance attended, he could not yet make this viewer feel the depth of Walter Lee's frustration and despair. (This does not seem to matter for many Combs fans in the audience. They are present in spirit onstage with him and the other actors.)

Philicia Rashad, Audra McDonald and Sanaa Lathan

Audra McDonald is impressive as Ruth, Walter Lee's repressed wife who must live in her mother-in-law's apartment with a man-child husband and work as a domestic. The playwright allows Ruth one break-out moment and Ms. McDonald makes the most of it. Sanaa Lathan, as Walter Lee's sister Beneatha, is delightful as a young woman becoming aware of feminism and all the possibilities soon to open for African American women. She is very humorous in a scene where she dons Nigerian native dress and dances to African drum music.

Ten-year old Travis Younger is well-played by Alexander Mitchell, already a Broadway veteran having portrayed Young Simba in The Lion King. Teagle F. Bougere is clear and precise as Asagai, Beneatha's Nigerian suitor who will return to his country to help it succeed democratically. Frank Harts is wonderfully straight as Beneatha's wealthy college-boy suitor George Murchison, a man looking for a quiet, obedient but intelligent wife. David Aaron Baker squirms delectably as Karl Lindner, a white working-class man entering the Youngers' lives, and Bill Nunn is endearing as Bobo, Walter Lee's friend. Director Kenny Leon takes this classic American play and keeps it relevant and meaningful for today's audiences. Thomas Lynch's slum apartment set, enhanced by Brian MacDevitt's lighting, is suitably depressing, imprisoning and cocoon-like. Paul Tazewell dresses the cast in 1950s garb that is almost having a comeback.

Lorraine Hansberry died of cancer in 1965 at 34. One mourns the loss of a great American playwright but her writings live on in an autobiographical theater piece, To Be Young, Gifted and Black, which had a long run Off Broadway and across the U.S. starting in 1968. The title for this play comes from Langston Hughes poem "Harlem," that asks at one point whether "a dream deferred withers up like a raisin in the sun."

This Raisin has not. First produced on Broadway in 1959, it won the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for Best Play that year. This production is only scheduled to run for seven weeks more but may be extended because of its popularity.

A Raisin in the Sun plays at the Royale Theatre, 242 West 45th Street, Tuesdays through Sundays until July 11. Tickets ($25-90) are available at the box office or from Telecharge.com, 800-432-7250 or 212-239-6200.

Take Five 2004 with Jan Silver

The performing arts and other entertainments flourish here all year long but shift to summer high this weekend. Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre opens its mainstage season with a new comedy, Limonade Tous Les Jours, starring Alan Alda. Guild Hall's John Drew Theater begins a two-weekend playreading marathon produced by the recently-formed professional local collective, Naked Stage. Great soul/R&B singer Oleta Adams gives a concert at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, and Martin Sexton, Nancy Atlas, Glenn Tilbrook and Reverend Horton Heat play at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse this weekend.

E.L. Doctorow will read from his new short story collection at BookHampton, East Hampton, on Saturday evening, and Guild Hall screens the Australian indie film He Died with a Falafel in his Hand on Sunday at 7 p.m. And, if it's Memorial Day Weekend, Saturday morning Dan's Papers 26th annual Potatohampton Minithon will run through Bridgehampton. For details on these events, and more, read on.

THEATER

Bay Street Theatre presents Charles L. Mee's new romantic comedy, Limonade Tous Les Jours, on its Sag Harbor stage this Friday through Sunday, with performances continuing next Tuesday through Sunday (June 6). Alan Alda stars as an American tourist in Paris mixing it up with a young French singer (Nicole Leach) and waiter (Eric Bondoc). Award-winning actress Zoe Caldwell (Master Class, etc.) directs. For tickets ($42-55), call the box office at 631-725-9500 or e-mail to boxoffice@baystreet.org.

The John Drew Theater at Guild Hall, East Hampton, is featuring Naked Stage's play-reading marathon this weekend and next. On Friday, May 28, they present Chris and Laura Engel's multimedia piece Voices to Hear: About and From the Women of Israel and Palestine at 8 p.m. This weekend's schedule: Saturday—Darlene Craviotto's comedy Pizza Man (4 p.m.), Hortense Carpentier's new comedy Cocktail (7 p.m.), Martin McDonagh's The Cripple of Inishmaan (8 p.m.); Sunday—R.J.MacDonald's new play Authority (1 p.m.) and Ed Eriksson's new play Flamingo Desires (3 p.m.). Admission charges are $5 per reading or $25 per weekend ($50 for a two-weekend pass).

The North Fork Community Theatre in Mattituck presents Noel Coward's comedy Nude with a Violin at their Sound Avenue playhouse this Friday through Sunday, and next. Tickets are $10: call 631-298-NFCT to reserve.

MUSIC

Singer-songwriter and Grammy Award-nominee Oleta Adams will be onstage Saturday, 8:30 p.m., at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. Her music is a mix of R&B, soul, and gospel. For tickets ($40-65), call the WHBPAC box office daily after 12 noon at 631-288-1500.

Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse has been working all winter on a dynamite line-up for the summer season to suit all musical tastes. This Friday, acoustic master Martin Sexton performs at 8 p.m. followed by popular local Nancy Atlas Project. Saturday, Sexton plays again at 8 followed by local Dana Fuchs. Sunday, acoustic great Glenn Tilbrook (lyricist from Squeeze) plays with The Fluffers at 7 p.m. followed by Reverend Horton Heat (Texas rockabilly) and Dollarman (reggae). Call 631-267-3117 for tickets or log onto www.stephentalkhouse.com.

theatre reviews: the two and only & heavenly

...by gordin & christiano

The Two and Only, which recently opened at the Atlantic Theater in Chelsea, is a thoroughly engaging evening written and performed by Jay Johnson that is sort of an autobiography of his life in the theater. He poignantly documents his lifelong obsession with ventriloquism, as well as giving us a brief history of the art. Mr. Johnson is a remarkable entertainer, who turns the staggeringly funny show into a touching personal journey. He is best known for playing the schizophrenic role of Chuck and Bob on the classic television sitcom Soap (1977-1981).

Mr. Johnson grew up in Texas and at age five discovered the power of laughter while performing and was quickly addicted. As his story unfolds, it becomes increasingly clear this man was destined to be a ventriloquist. In The Two and Only Mr. Johnson not only gives life and voice to eleven different zany characters and objects, but also creates a relationship with each one. They include a snake, a bird (Nevernore), a monkey (Darwin), Squeaky (his first doll), Bob from the TV series, a tennis ball, a telephone, a severed human head, and he even brings life to a face he has just drawn. He makes his puppets speak without moving his lips, and the voices actually sound as if they are coming right out of the characters' mouths. He even makes it sound as if someone is speaking from within a closed suitcase. He makes voices sound as if they are far away or coming from the next room. Mr. Johnson is a story teller who is a talented actor as well, and his performance will astound you.

This distinctive evening is a riotous good time that I promise will lift your spirits. The ventriloquist, who the press release describes as a poet and a philosopher, is a gifted comedian as well. He may be the finest ventriloquist living today, and he elevates the ancient craft to an art form. You will be swept away by the magic the captivating Jay Johnson weaves. He will amuse the child in you as well as touch your heart.

Jay Johnson with Darwin in The Two and Only

Heavenly is the fourth production of 59E59 Theater's Brits Off Broadway drama fest. Devised by the internationally acclaimed British Theater company Frantic Assembly, the one act play tells about the difficulties of the afterlife, as three friends struggle to find meaning in their new environment. The friends, it seems, have lost their lives on a drunken New Year's Eve, or have they? Maybe they are just flatlining. You'll soon find out and in the process consider some serious questions about death, life, grieving and the importance of your choices.

The play, adapted from a story by Gary Owen, performed and directed by three actors, Steven Hoggett, Scott Graham, and Liam Steel, is part farce and part naturalistic story. It manages to jump back and forth without losing continuity. Stylized physical movement is woven into the dialogue, which seems to be an extension of the characters' emotional states. The actors deliver finely crafted physical performances that move at lightning speed, changing tempo, mood and emotional level in the blink of an eye. The beautifully designed show (Dick Bird) is an immensely appealing evening, which pushes the boundaries of conventional theatre and is exhilarating in the process. Check with the 59E59 Theater for upcoming and continuing productions of Brits Off Broadway, which will continue in the three theaters until July 4th.

The Two and Only is now playing at The Atlantic Theater Company, 336 West 20th Street (between 8th and 9th Avenues). Tickets are available through www.Telecharge.com or by calling 212-239-6200. Heavenly is now playing in Theater B at 59E59 Theaters. Tickets are available at the box office or from Ticket Central by phone: 212-279-4200 or online: www.ticketcentral.com

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Will it be a hit or a myth? This kind of joke is to be expected of Troy, the movie adaptation of the close to 3,000 year old lyric epic, Homer's Iliad, since it stars Brad Pitt and is directed by Wolfgang Peterson, whose The Perfect Storm made a big splash but wasn't exactly perfect – by a long shot. Then, there's the scope and grandeur of the work, which has defied popularization, unlike The Bible that has spawned more filmic trash than gangsterdom. In years past, the reading and study of The Iliad was de rigueur whereas today, it is regularly eschewed and Trojans are latex condoms, Troy is a town upstate where your Aunt Tillie lives, Paris is on the Bush Administration hit list and Achilles is a heel – not the vengeful, tempestuous warrior with a conscience portrayed by Mr. Pitt. Those unaware of Homer's complex poem of militaristic honor and ambitious love and virtue and the competitive politics of ancient Greece will more easily enjoy the lavish, 200 million dollar production that puts war into a perspective that will bedazzle the uninitiated audience. Forget the obvious aspects of the film so easy to poke fun at like (tee-hee) Brad's bare buns. Simply because it's so easy to pan Troy, I say this film is well worth seeing.

Pretentious critics will snicker at the pageantry and earnest dialog that speaks of mortality, immortality, loyalty and human frailty, but I say, it's about time – 3,000 years has not aged the power of the Homeric characters. Troy not only vividly fleshes out its fascinating cast of characters but also retains a great deal of the big-bones structure of the skeletal armature of the immense saga. No easy task. Even eliminating the roles of the gods (a sin if you are a scholarly type) the film clocks in at 140 minutes to tell the tale hereby simplified: The beautiful Helen, queen of Sparta, (German model Diane Kruger), is so beautiful Prince Paris of Troy (Orlando Bloom), on a mission for peace, falls in love with her and takes her home. This greatly upsets Menelaus, Sparta's ruler (Brendan Gleeson) who takes his complaint to his brother, the powerful Agamemnon (Brian Cox) who doesn't need much of an excuse to war for land. He unleashes his army and its great celebrity fighter, Achilles.

As Achilles, Pitt gives a strong performance and is believable as one who wars for fame and will battle for loyalty as well. Performances by mostly British and Australian actors are all excellent, with a standout performance by Eric Bana as Hector, the stark contrasting Trojan opposition to Achilles, leading ultimately to a duel between the two. Emotionally and intellectually, it is the crux of the film. It's to the movie-makers credit and, the credits include screenplay by David Benioff (25th Hour), that the movie has a reverberating depth that challenges the booming intonations of James Horner's music and then some. Pulling a wisp of inspiration from David Lean's Lawrence of Arabia, Peter O'Toole appears as Priam, Hector's father. On a beach extending from a roiling surf, he looks up at a towering 38-foot wooden horse and exclaims with old eyes, "What is this? What is this?" The actual location is in Baja California, but you believe that it is the Trojan horse and it will come to bristling life if you believed hard enough. As for immortality – the god's envied man's mortality.

opera preview: hansel & gretel

The fantasy world of Hansel and Gretel, that charming, if at times, scary fairy story of two children and their encounters with a wicked witch who loves to turn children into edible gingerbread people and which, of course, like all good fairy stories, has to end with everyone living happily ever after – apart from the witch, naturally, has charmed children and adults for many years, both in the original story by the Brothers Grimm but probably mostly through Englebert Humperdinck's wonderfully evocative opera. (This Humperdinck is the original one, not the pop singer of the 70s who, for reasons best known to himself and his agent, appropriated this pseudonym!)

Students learning about opera first-hand

Now, the Morriss Center is presenting the Opera of the Hamptons' fully staged production of Hansel & Gretel on Saturday June 5th at their Hampton Day Campus in Butter Lane, Bridgehampton. This will represent the culmination of a four week opera residency program at the school where acclaimed internationally known artists such as Richard Hobson, who is appearing this season with the Metropolitan Opera, Rosa D'Imperio, Michael Scott Harris and Hayden DeWitt led by Barbara Giancola, and artistic director of the opera company and music director, Phyllis Falleta-Olsen have brought the magic of opera into the classrooms. Working with the very youngest kindergarten children through to eighth graders, the programs have been designed to be appropriate for each age and above all to involve the children so that they can learn first hand just what makes opera such a wonderful form of expression and for them to have fun while learning. Janet Stork is the Executive Director and Head of School and she explained how exciting it has been. "It is very rare these days for students to have hands-on learning opportunities with professionals of this caliber. At the Morriss Center we are committed to sharing quality cultural and artistic programming such as this with the local community as well as our own students."

This promises to be a project the children are unlikely to forget easily, because, apart from having fun in the classrooms, many of them are being coached for the actual performance when a singing chorus of 63 gingerbread children drawn from the 5th to 8th Grades, as well as 14 Kindergarteners dancing as Guardian Angels, will be appearing with the professional cast. The Field House auditorium is also being transformed into a German forest by the children of the school. Barbara Giancola commented, "It really is a tribute to the staff at the Hampton Day at the Morriss Center, particularly Janet Stork and her Deputy, Elka Rifkin, together with Mark Tompkins, the Middle School Co-Ordinator and Cindy Willis who has been such a help as Program Co-Ordinator, that their students have had this wonderful opportunity to be involved in all aspects of the production, from set building to dancing and singing in the actual performance.

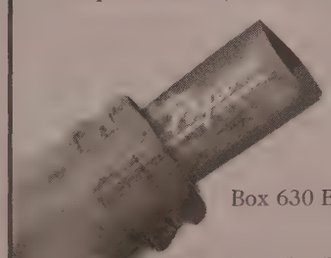

The main roles in the opera will be taken by Shira Flam as Gretel, Hayden DeWitt as Hansel, Deborah Fields as the Witch, Michelle Menick as the Mother and Robert Garner as the Father. Hayley Willis, an 8th Grade student at the school, who has previously performed with Opera of the Hamptons, will sing the role of the Sandman. Once again, Atarah Hazzan will bring her considerable talents to the demanding task of Music Director, with Hayden DeWitt not only singing a lead role but also being the Stage Director.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

Learning To Be Like Jackson And Willem And Roy

Our area is one of the most famous artists' communities in the country, if not the world. William Meritt Chase, Jackson Pollock, Willem de Kooning, Larry Rivers, Roy Lichtenstein, Julian Schnabel, Eric Fischl, and Ross Bleckner are just a few of the great painters that live here, or lived here before passing away. It only makes sense that in the tradition of the Hamptons artist, there should be a Hamptons art class. Or two, or four. If you look in Day By Day in this paper each week, you'll usually find a class or two. The Southampton Artists Association offers and sponsors several classes including Classical Oil Painting classes with instructor Robert R. Mehling. Mehling is a master at the art of trompe l'oeil and traditional realism, but also understands that work must speak beyond the imitative, and say something about the artist and his observations. His class is held on Tuesdays from 6-9 p.m. at the Southampton Cultural Center at 2 Pond Lane, and costs $80 a month. Call 208-1370. Weekly figure drawing workshops are back from the Southampton Artists Association, and are open to everyone. On Wednesdays from 7-9:30 p.m., the class is also held at the Southampton Cultural Center. They provide a model and refreshments for a nominal fee of $5 to pay the model. Call 283-8613, all skill levels are welcome. The Artist Association is dedicated to the development and success of the visual artists of the East End. They are located at 149 Hampton Road in Southampton and state their mission to hold informational meetings, present shows, workshops and other programs to support the arts.

Moving farther east is the Artists' Woods on Abraham's Path in East Hampton. A 16-acre private estate features the Hamptons' first year-round art school with a gallery and gardens with both contemporary and retrospective art shows. The "Woods" Gallery & Gardens are open to the public during the summer, Memorial Day - Labor Day from noon to 5 p.m., Friday through Sunday. Classes are scheduled all week and are available for adults and children alike. Adults can find a plethora of classes including computer classes for Quark, Illustrator, and Photoshop. The computer skills are becoming more and more necessary in today's changing world of creativity and business. Children's classes are equally broad. Most popular for youngsters is their Children's Art Studio (CAS) Summer Program which features Painting, Watercolor, Computer Art, Tempera, Sculpture, Collage, Sketching, Art In Nature, Art of Organic Gardening, Art of the Cookie, Digital Photography, Art of the T-Shirt (textile art), Found Objects, and Clay Basics. Participation in the Children's Art Show on Labor Day weekend is a must for children who have taken a class. Seeing your art hung in a show is exciting for anyone, especially kids. You can register for from 1 class to 100 or even more - whatever suits your children's schedule. Click over to www.artistswoods.com for class schedule and registration.

The Cadillac of art classes is The Victor D'Amico Institute of Art, otherwise known as The Art Barge. The summer art school is located along Napeague Stretch on the way to Montauk. Founded in 1960 by Victor D'Amico, Director of Education at the Museum of Modern Art, the Institute is situated on a World War I Navy barge that was towed ashore and beached along Napeague Harbor. In the spirit of Hamptons Bohemia, the Art Barge has the best location around for inspiration and old Hamptons charm. The bay laps the shore on one side, while the ocean thunders across the dunes. Surrounded by a New York State wetlands preserve, walks along the rails can put anyone in the mood to paint and ponder those great artists that came before. They offer weekend workshops as well as a summer-long painting studio. This is the ideal location to hone your skills and get in touch with what our area means. The Barge has a small exhibition gallery, library, and art supply store, and offers small events such as screenings and lectures. Call 267-3172.

My mother is not an artist. She's taking a watercolor class at the Siena Spirituality Center in Watermill, and I can see how much joy it brings her. Each new painting she brings home is a vast improvement from the last. But more than that, it makes her happy. She is living proof that a little art in our lives can go a long way. Take a chance, and don't be afraid if art has never been your strong suit. If my mom can do it anyone can.

Songs For Your Soireé

The tablecloth is spread, the candles are casting a dancing glow on the walls. Flowers burst from the centerpiece, and the cooks are already sipping wine as they stir. Everything is ready, and the guests are on their way. So what is missing from this dinner party? What do you need to keep the mood energetic and relaxed at once? The final touch that really kicks a dinner party into gear: the music.

Usually during a dinner party you're going for something that creates a mood without being distracting; something that provides a good soundtrack to conversation. Sometimes it can also add to the feel of a party to have music that is consistent with the food. If you're serving food with a Brazilian flare, it's fun to allow your music to complement that.

I find that albums that are too focused on the lyrics usually aren't so great for dinner parties. There are some exceptions, but if you love an album, you might find yourself distracted by the words of the musician, inhibiting you from creating lively discussion. I find this is especially true with hip-hop. It may be great for upbeat cooking and decorating, but once you sit down to dinner, a lyrical rapper is only going to take away from what your guests have to say.

Part of the beauty of throwing a party is the preparation, but the only way to enjoy it is to have great music blasting as you get dressed and dress the house. You can break down your dinner party music into the phases of the evening. The first phase is setting up, and you want something upbeat that will get you and your fellow hosts or hostesses psyched. A great choice for this kind of energetic, engulfing music is Vivian Green. She's got a clear, strong voice and knows how to drop the kind of beat that will get you swinging from the kitchen to the dining room, dancing all the way. Another great option for setting up is Lauryn Hill. She has a beautiful voice and an attitude, and her music is energizing.

Now it's time to start cooking, and you still want energy. After all, this is all building up to the party. A great choice for a cooking CD is The Best of Dean Martin. It's a three-CD set, and when you throw this in, stirring the sauce and chopping the garlic are going to feel like dancing. It's got swing, it's a classic, and it's Dean Martin. Need I say more?

The next phase is getting yourself ready. Now you need something I like to call your "theme song." This song changes throughout your life, but it usually sticks around for a while. It is the song that you put on when you are feeling at your best. When the sun is shining and the world is beautiful, I put on my theme song and can't help but dance. When I get ready for a party, I want to feel like this. So what is your theme song? Mine is Karl Densen Tiny Universe: She's Stronger Than You See. I love it because it's got a funky bass line, a great trumpet, fabulous lyrics, and it always gets me dancing. My brother gets dressed to Bjork's He Believes In Beauty, very fitting for a man with style getting ready to host a dinner party.

Album cover, Buena Vista Social Club

So the table is set, the food is prepared, and you look gorgeous. So what music do you have playing when the guests are arriving? Again, you've got to go with energy, but now you don't necessarily want something you're going to burst into song with. Now it's time to be social. One of the most energetic CDs that still works wonderfully as background music is the Groove soundtrack. It has a great beat and somehow always makes you feel like it's The Beginning. Another great light, upbeat album to kick off the night is Stan Getz and Jao Gilberto, featuring the beloved song The Girl From Ipanima, a fabulous background to meeting and welcoming.

Now for the heart of the order: I have three strong recommendations for dinner. They all add the spicy flavor of international music, and they are all engaging but not distracting. Buena Vista Social Club is a wonderful soundtrack of Cuban music that adds spirit and interest to a party, but the very fact that the words are in a language that many people don't speak means that the words will not be distracting, and the music will be a great accompaniment. Another classic favorite of mine is St. Germaine – Tourist. I was in a bar in Barcelona the first time I heard it, and it is to this day the only time I have ever walked up to the bartender, asked for the name of the CD, and bought it the next day. It is a must-have, and its energy, rhythm, and flow are perfect for a dinner party. Finally, Pink Martini – Sympathetique. It's classy, it's beautiful, and it's the perfect accompaniment.

For relaxing after dinner, I like to turn to jazz. There's no one like Ella and Louis for stretching out with a cocktail and digesting. Let's face it: there's no one like Ella and Louis, period. They must be incorporated into your evening.

Finally, the goodbye. A great last song is Finley Quaye's Even After All. Everyone's hugging and feeling warm from a fabulous evening of conversation and food, and the lyrics echo in the ears of the departing guests. "You know I love you so, even after all..."

So there you have it: beginning to end, some of the greatest music that will add flavor to any dinner party. Bon appetit and happy listening!

Rod Stewart To Headline "All For The Sea Benefit"

Rod Stewart is the headlining act at the "All For The Sea" concert at Southampton College this year. He sold out this same show in 1998, and a packed house is expected again this year. Rod is in the midst of a 44-city tour, and will be swinging into Southampton on Monday, August 23. He will be performing his much loved older songs like "Maggie May," "Downtown Train," and "Have I Told You Lately," as well as classics from his new album "The Great American Songbook." Songs on this album include "It Had To Be You" and "As Time Goes By." This new album just entered the Billboard Top 200 Album Chart at #2.

The concert is to benefit Southampton College's renowned marine and environmental science programs. The college hopes to raise funds for scholarship programs. Since the first year, the college has raised almost $13 million for students and programs, and the benefit has always featured top names like Jimmy Buffett in 2000, the Allman Brothers in 1996, and Tina Turner in 1993. This year will be the 13th annual "All for the Sea" concert.

Tickets for the benefit can be purchased at any Long Island Sound location, at Long Wharf Wines and Spirits in Sag Harbor, or at Lynne's Cards and Gifts in Westhampton Beach. Or you can order through TicketMaster by calling 631-888-9000 or logging on to www.ticketmaster.com.

Naked Stage Play Marathon At Guild Hall

Naked Stage, a recently formed collective of East End theater professionals and amateurs dedicated to developing more theater here, is presenting a two-weekend play-reading marathon at the John Drew Theater of Guild Hall, East Hampton, starting this Friday, May 28. There will be ten playreadings this weekend and next, two performance piece presentations, and a panel discussion about East End theater next weekend. One highlight of the marathon is Roy Scheider reading one of the leads in Arthur Miller's classic drama All My Sons next Saturday evening, June 5.

Admission to each reading is $5; a weekend pass is $25, and a two-weekend marathon pass is $50. Tickets can be purchased in advance at the Guild Hall box office or at the door on the day of performance. After each reading, audience members are invited to a discussion with the cast about the play.

The marathon begins Friday at 8 p.m. with Voices to Hear: About and From the Women of Israel and Palestine by Chris and Laura Engel. This is a staged performance of a multimedia piece consisting of Israeli and Palestinian women's writings and letters, from ancient times to the present, accompanied by original slides, film and music.

On Saturday at 4 p.m. Darlene Craviotto's comedy Pizza Man will be read, followed by Hortense Carpentier's new play Cocktail at 7 p.m. and celebrated young Irish playwright Martin McDonagh's comedic drama The Cripple of Inishmaan at 8 p.m. On Sunday, local playwright R.J. MacDonald's new drama Authority can be heard at 1 p.m., and Ed Eriksson's new erotic mystery Flamingo Desires goes on at 3 p.m.

Next Saturday, June 5, East End theater producers, artists and journalists will discuss "Making Theater on the East End" at 1 p.m. Panelists include: Lee Davis, theater critic for The Southampton Press; Dan Rattiner, editor and publisher of Dan's Papers; Steve Hamilton, executive director of Bay Street Theatre; Sarah Hunnewell, executive director of Hampton Theater Company; Jonathan Peters, producer for Spindletop Productions; Tonni Munna, resident director of River Theater Company; and Josh Gladstone, artistic director of John Drew Theater. There is no admission charge for this discussion and the public is encouraged to participate.

Next weekend's readings begin on Friday, June 4, at 8 p.m. with Roger Greenbaum's An Evening at Home: An Hour in Celebration of Robert Frost. Following next Saturday's panel discussion, Stephen F. Kelleher's new comedy The Lawless Sun will be read at 4 p.m., Jan Buckaloo's new one-acter In Paradisum goes on at 7 p.m. and Arthur Miller's classic All My Sons will be read at 8 p.m.

Sunday, June 6, the marathon concludes with DeCe's performance piece E.Solo Moda ("It's Only Fashion") about haute couture vs. homeless couture at 1 p.m. and Marina Carr's tragedy loosely based on Medea, By the Bog of Cats, at 3 p.m. For more information, call the Guild Hall box office at 631-324-4050. –Jan Silver Memorial Day (also referred to as Decoration Day) is the official observance for decorating the graves of American solders. While not losing sight of honoring our current American heroes all over the world and their bravery, it is also a weekend of celebration.

There will be festivals, fairs and parades. Family and friends will gather around on this official beginning of summer, and food, as with all celebrations, plays a pivotal role.

Two of our own area chefs, Kevin Penner, executive chef of 1770 House in East Hampton and Doug Gujila, chef/owner of the award winning Plaza Café in Southampton, have generously afforded us the timely dishes they will be preparing for the holiday.

For those working the grill this weekend, Kevin's grilled tuna with his take on the classic Italian pepperonata, a splendid dish of sweet peppers, pungent capers and pureed tomatoes, is a creative objective. Kevin is also the executive chef at the new Cittanuova, a casual and authentic Italian restaurant in East Hampton, with James Gee as Chef de Cuisine.

With fresh cherries piling up in bins at our local markets, Doug Gulija's mom Mitzi, who prepares all the desserts at the restaurant, will be preparing an original Croatian recipe for fresh cherry cake with homemade cherry ice cream and fresh cherry compote this celebratory weekend. I wish you peace, safety and happy cooking.

1770 HOUSE GRILLED TUNA WITH PEPPERONATA

Kevin Penner, executive chef of the 1770 House in East Hampton will add this innovative grilled tuna dish to his menu this holiday weekend.

Serves 6

6 6-ounce slices sashimi quality tuna, about 1-inch thick
1 1/2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

For the pepperonata

2-3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 small red onion, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
3 each red and yellow bell pepper, trimmed and cut into julienne
2 tablespoons capers, preferably salted and rinsed
1 cup pureed tomatoes, preferably tinned San Marzano
2 teaspoons sherry vinegar
2 sprigs fresh oregano
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1.Prepare pepperonata ahead: Heat olive oil in a skillet and sauté the onion and garlic until tender, about 3-4 minutes. Add the peppers and continue over medium heat about 5-6 minutes until peppers are softened slightly. Add capers, pureed tomatoes and vinegar. Reduce to a simmer and let cook until the sauce coats the back of a spoon, about 15- 18 minutes. Add oregano, salt and pepper to taste and simmer another minute. If doing ahead, simmer the sauce until hot while the tuna cooks.

2.Prepare your grill for cooking the tuna. Meanwhile rub each tuna slice with olive oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper. When coals are ashen gray or on a medium-hot gas grill, spray or brush the grate with oil and put on the tuna. Grill the tuna pieces about 1 to 1 1/2 minutes on all sides for rare to medium rare (as tuna should always be served).

3. Divide and spoon sauce on 6 plates and top with fanned out slices of tuna. Finish with a drizzle of extra-virgin olive oil. (For polenta enthusiasts the chef suggests serving the above over softened polenta, if desired.)

PLAZA CAFÉ'S CHERRY CAKE WITH CHERRY COMPOTE

Mitzi Gulija prepares this dessert with fresh homemade cherry ice cream at the Plaza Café restaurant in Southampton.

Serves 6-8

For the compote

2/3 cup water
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons fresh orange juice
1 cinnamon stick
1 pound fresh cherries, pitted

For the cake

1/2 pound unsalted butter (2 sticks)
1 1/4 cups sugar
4 large eggs, separated
1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1 1/4 pounds fresh cherries, pitted
Powdered sugar and fresh mint sprig garnish (optional)
Cherry ice cream, homemade or store bought

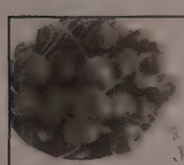

1.For the compote: Combine water and sugar in a saucepan over medium heat. Stir until sugar is dissolved, add orange juice and cinnamon stick and bring to a boil. Cook at a brisk simmer until liquid is reduced by half. Check cooking level from time to time. Meanwhile, pit cherries over a bowl to catch the liquid. Add cherries and juices to the syrup and simmer until cherries are tender, about 6-7 minutes. Compote can be prepared up to 3 days ahead. Cover and refrigerate. Serve at room temperature.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

2. For the cake: Butter and flour an 8-inch round cake pan. Cream butter and sugar in a stand-up electric mixer or by hand. Continue beating while adding egg yolks, one at a time. Sift the flour and baking powder and add to the creamed mixture on low speed.

3. In a clean bowl with clean beaters, beat egg whites until firm but not dry. (This procedure can take about 2 1/2 to 3 minutes.) Carefully fold into the batter with a large rubber spatula. Pour the batter into the prepared cake pan and scatter cherries over the top, pressing lightly with fingertips to submerge the cherries slightly. Bake for 30-35 minutes or until cake tester inserted into the center of the cake comes out clean. Allow cake to rest in pan before turning it out onto a rack to cool. Serve warm with a scoop of cherry ice cream, topped with cherry compote.

Silvia Lehrer, columnist and culinary educator, will teach a fully participating cooking class featuring do-ahead international summer buffet dishes for entertaining all summer long on Thursday June 3, 6:00 – 9:30 p.m. Call (631) 537 7831 for registration and detailed schedule.

Turtle Crossing

221 Pantigo Road, East Hampton
631-324-7166

About two weeks ago, I was driving around, searching for dinner. I had left work while it was still light out, and it was a beautiful evening, clear and approaching sunset. I instinctively headed away from town, towards Amagansett, just because it is such a pretty drive. I didn't really have a food plan in mind, and then boom! I saw it. Action at Turtle Crossing.

In this country, summer means barbecue, and in East Hampton, of course, barbecue means Turtle Crossing. I stopped short, made a U-turn, and drove back, scarcely believing my eyes. Could it be true? It had been a very long, very cold, rather dining-challenged winter for me, and I was so looking forward to the seasonal openings of my favorite places. And here was one of the best.

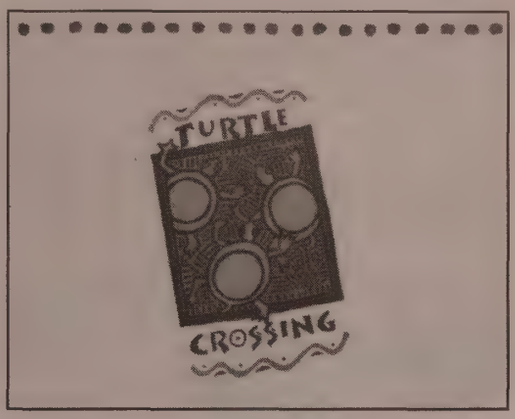

There were cars in the driveway, and children peering out the windows. So far, so good. And then I saw it. The OPEN sign. I walked in, took a quick look around, and a quick whiff of the scented air. Summer had arrived.

Turtle Crossing has been in East Hampton for a decade, though it started out small and slowly morphed into the roomy, festive and welcoming spot that it is today. Nancy and Stanley Singer, Manhattan transplants looking for a new challenge, opened the restaurant with a few of Stanley's own recipes from his previous life in Oklahoma, and he cooked them himself. These recipes, including the awesomely balanced, thick, smoky, sweet barbecue sauce are still on the menu though they are now prepared by Chef Arthur Wolfe.

I ordered my favorites for takeout, everything I had been missing, without even looking at the menu. I ordered way too much, and we had leftovers for three days.

Last Thursday, I returned to Turtle Crossing to have dinner with a friend, in a much more relaxed mood. We still ordered too much, and I still had leftovers, but this time, I actually read the menu and sampled some new items.

New to the selection of small dishes is the fish taco, a lovely mixture of seafood in a light dressing served chilled on a tortilla. We also ordered a sample of the classic appetizers – golden fried jalapeno buttermilk hushpuppies, tangy jumbo BBQ chicken wings, creamy spinach & goat cheese dip with warm, homemade tortilla chips, fresh guacamole and chunky salsa, and deep fried artichokes. Each was cooked to its specific perfection and served with a perfectly spiced and creamy dipping sauce. Since I don't eat meat I need an excuse to savor the barbecue sauce, and I therefore have no choice but to douse almost everything else. You should try this – the sauce has the perfect consistency, even if you only drip a drop on an unsuspecting hushpuppie.

I also couldn't resist ordering the char grilled corn on the cob with cotija cheese and chili powder, one of the greatest traditional Mexican treats ever. I've eaten it in many restaurants and none compares to Turtle Crossing. It is exactly the right amount of cheese and spice, and the corn kernels burst with every bite. I always conveniently forget that there are two ears of corn per order, and it's impossible not to be happy when four ears arrive.

Next, we tasted and shared a few entrees. (I recommend this at Turtle Crossing. Everything goes together so beautifully, and you don't want to miss anything, but the portions are huge.) The Rum-Pepper Painted Salmon, velvety and moist, served with baby spinach, pan sautéed plantain and diced mango mojo, was excellent. All the different textures and colors and tastes contrasted and complemented each other in a great balance. The new Cilantro-Almond Crusted Sea Bass was also perfectly cooked, with a hint of smokiness from the nuts and a burst of freshness from the cilantro. With this fish, we tried two fixins' – the fluffy garlic chive whipped mashed potatoes – what could be better? – and the sautéed brussel sprouts, which didn't hold a hint of bitterness. There are ten fixins' to choose from, and it's never easy to decide. So, we tasted Arthur's beans (black) and the super spicy whipped sweet potatoes, too.

Now what? Drum roll, please.....the meat. The famous, BBQ meat. Out from the kitchen came an enormous platter that smelled so good it almost converted me. It was a selection of smoked BBQ chicken, smoked BBQ ribs, smoked BBQ brisket and smoked BBQ Pulled Pork. The meat was falling-off-the-bones soft, charred on the outside with a glazed, smoky, honey tinged sweetness, a subtle heat, or a light spiciness, depending on which it was. As my friend said, if she could have eaten it all, she would have. Instead, she went home happy, with a very large bag in her hand.

But we didn't leave before trying the dense and gooey pineapple bread pudding, airy chocolate mousse and a bite of a classic brownie sundae. Whew.

The laid-back, neighborhood feel of this restaurant makes it perfect for kids, and there are always a few running around. But the energy in the air and the great food makes Turtle Crossing a perfect weekend date place, or a relaxing weeknight stop on the way home from work. On Friday nights, Turtle Crossing hosts live music from Mama Lee & Friends and serves two for one Dos Equis, in addition to its frozen drinks, menu of tequilas, cocktails and wine by the bottle and the glass. New this year is the weekend brunch, with a diverse menu that includes a smoked salmon sandwich, chipolte egg salad and huevos rancheros. They also run a busy catering business, handling off-premise events and private parties.

Turtle Crossing is a special, well-loved restaurant, and the best confirmation that the season of relaxing with friends and loved ones is finally here.

The Driver's Seat

62 Jobs Lane, Southampton
631-283-6606

The Driver's Seat in Southampton welcomes you through its rustic exterior into the barroom with a dark wooden interior and casual atmosphere. It's the perfect place to curl up around a tall glass of beer to watch a game on one of the televisions hanging over the bar. From the bar, you can order from the appetizer menu stuffed mushrooms, spring rolls, or the famous wings, or just enjoy the basket of warm rolls while you wait for dinner. There is an extensive selection of beers on tap, plus a wine list and a hard bar.

My party, though, decided to venture to the back room, where dinner was a little bit cozier, but still definitely had the relaxed atmosphere. The ambience is great, the ceiling curved like the hull of a boat and the lighting bright enough to be lively but dim enough not to be intrusive. It's difficult to find a place in the Hamptons where you can spend the night ordering beers and burgers and really kicking back. This culinary capital so often caters to the "fancy night out." But The Driver's Seat offers generous portions of food at a price you can really stomach. And you don't have to have any qualms about bursting into loud laughter at the table or showing up in jeans.

Sometimes I've felt there was a lack of good restaurants that are kid-friendly around here. There are so many places to go for a romantic evening, but a kid wouldn't feel at home in one of those dimly lit, quiet restaurants. The Driver's Seat, with its hardwood floors and cozy booths, is much more welcoming to little people dining out. There is plenty for them to order, like burgers and pasta, and there are also options for more refined palettes, like mussels or other fresh seafood options.

The menu has options for every taste, from the juicy shrimp scampi to the spicy wings to the fluffy chocolate cake. Plus, there was even a good selection for the dieters. My sister ordered the pasta-less shrimp primavera, which offered the flavor without all the much-feared carbohydrates. Of course we made up for it with the key lime pie and the chocolate cake.

The service was great. The wait staff was approachable and courteous, and by the end of our meal I felt like we had become friends with our waitress, who was attentive and friendly.

When do you go to the Driver's Seat? Any time you don't feel like cooking but also don't feel like spending a fortune, when you feel like going out but don't feel like getting dressed up. It's a great place to bring the kids or a large group, and it's a place where you can kick up your feet and relax. And this summer, The Driver's Seat will be featuring the live music of the Luma Jazz Trio on Saturday and Monday nights at 8 p.m. The relaxed atmosphere will be very conducive to the cool sounds of Luma, and you can linger over drinks or coffee for the whole evening.

There aren't many pubs in the Hamptons, and the Driver's Seat has that kind of a warm, oaky feel. So if you're looking for a place to meet friends for a beer or to watch the NBA finals, head down to the Driver's Seat in Southampton.

Tentation, Potel & Chabot, international caterers and event designers, will showcase the Blue Moon Ball benefiting EECO Farm of East Hampton. The event will be hosted by Vicki & Stuart Match Suna at their home on Saturday, July 31st, with Christie Brinkley & Peter Cook serving as Honorary Chairpersons. Tentation will incorporate the organic produce grown at EECO Farm in their evening's menu, which will include choices such as charred corn, tomato & basil salad, Szechuan pepper crusted tuna with gingered bok choy and carrot threads, straight from the farm, shrimp prepared with fresh picked tomatoes, as well as many other sumptuous dishes. Fairway Market will present an organic cheese and fruit table to complement Tentation's menu. Michael Lynne's wineries Corey Creek & Bedell Cellars will provide all of the wine and Argent Vodka will create potions for the evening. Alice Waters, the mother of organic food and founder of Chez Panisse has donated a day in her kitchen, working with her executive chef, followed by dinner at the private table in the kitchen, reserved for honored guests, for the auction. Dinner for 10 catered by Art of Eating partnered with a champagne cruise on a 42' sailboat will also be auctioned, among other incredible, one-of-a-kind items. Dan Barber, Executive Chef at Blue Hill at Stone Barns, the $30 million dollar Center for Food & Agriculture backed by David Rockefeller on the family's estate in Pocantico Hills, N.Y., will be honored that evening with the Blue Moon Ball Award. Reservations and information Linda B. Shapiro 329-5480.

Robert's (726-7171) in Water Mill has introduced a new $27, three course prix fixe. The ever-changing "marketplace menu" will emphasize seasonal dishes. The prix fixe will be available Thursday and Sunday all evening, and from 5 p.m. until 6 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

Rowdy Hall (324-8555) in East Hampton has announced some new additions to their lunch and dinner menu. Creative new dishes include: arugula salad with fried herb goat cheese, toasted hazelnuts, red wine vinaigrette ($9), roasted calamari with white wine, oil, garlic, herbs and toasted baguette ($10), grilled asparagus with lemon vinaigrette ($8.50), grilled chicken breast sandwich with avocado, romaine lettuce, tomato, toasted Tuscan bread and French fries ($11), grilled leg of lamb with warm white beans, arugula, shaved fennel ($21), roasted halibut with pea shoots and fingerling potatoes ($22), sautéed calves liver with baby spinach salad, creamy warm bacon vinaigrette ($18), and for dessert, a classic root beer float.

The Clam Bar (267-6348) at Napeague was recently featured in Coastal Living magazine. The article entitled "Our Favorite Seafood Dives: At these 25 no-frill eateries, the only thing that has to be rich is the flavor," says "The Clam Bar takes seafood seriously, with daily fresh-fish specials and careful cooking to order." The Clam Bar was one of only two restaurants featured in the state of New York.

Pacific East (267-7770) in Amagansett will expand their hours to seven days starting Thursday, May 27th. They will open at 5:30 p.m. nightly and serve until 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and until midnight Friday and Saturday. The prix fixe will now be $21.95 (cash only) for three courses or $24.95 with credit card. It will be offered Thursday night all night and all other evenings from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. As well, the summer menu will be in effect featuring all the favorite summer dishes.

The Plaza Cafe in Southampton (283-9323) will host a Greek Wine Dinner on Thursday, May 27th. The evening will begin with a reception at 6:30 p.m. and will be followed by a five-course meal paired with selected Greek wines. The cost for the evening is $100 per person. Sample menu items include: California Thai prawn salad; local grilled asparagus with lobster-morel ragout; pan roasted king salmon with pea puree, red wine sauce and black trumpets; herb crusted rack of lamb with roast garlic flan and morel sauce and fresh berry napoleon.

Clambakes! I'll Bring The Melted Butter

Everyone usually looks forward to summer holiday weekends. That is, of course, if you don't have to work (like we do at Dan's Papers). But we definitely know how to have fun. And with that thought in mind, you, your family and friends begin to plan outdoor gatherings and festive parties. For your Memorial Day gathering, why not have a clambake? They're simple, fun and a bit more adventurous than your average BBQ that usually includes your plain old hamburgers and hotdogs.

Clambakes can be fun for the whole family. Whether you have a clambake in your kitchen, backyard or on the beach, everyone can participate. From husking corn to digging a fire pit in the sand to scrubbing the clam shells clean, you won't be bored. You may be thinking this is a lot of work, but it actually makes it more of a fun event.

For this recipe, we'll do the Beach Blanket Clambake according to the "Food Network" website.

Serves 8 to 12 people

Ingredients:
8 ears of corn
8 potatoes
8 lobster tails
16 lobster claws
2 kielbasa, split and cut in 8 pieces
8 dozen hard-shell clams, such as cherrystone or littleneck
2 whole flounders, wrapped in alluminum foil with thyme, oil, and lemon slices
8 dozen oysters

Steps
1. Dig a shallow pit in the sand and line with large stones.
2. Gather driftwood from the beach and pile on top of stones.
3. Create a bonfire by burning the wood at least an hour until the rocks are hot enough
4. Rake off the ashes and set 1 cinder block on each corner of the fire pit to form a base.
5. Place a barbecue grate or piece of steel on top to make a table
6. Gather seaweed from the shore and place a thick layer on the metal.
7. Place potatoes and corn on the rack and cover with a thin layer of seaweed.
8. Equally distribute the lobster tails, claws and kielbasa on top and put a thin layer of seaweed on top.
9. Set clams and flounder on top and cover with another layer of seaweed.
10. Then set the oysters on top and cover with a thick layer of seaweed.
11. Cover the entire bake with burlap or a tarp soaked in seawater. The tarp will help the steam bake the food and the juices will drip down on the corn and potatoes to add flavor. Make sure to keep the tarp wet by pouring seawater over the top as needed.
12. Cook until the clams open and the lobsters turn bright red. Approximately 1 1/2 hours.
13. Finally, serve with lots of melted butter and freshly cut lemons.

A few tips for your clambake.
1. Shells should be tightly closed.
2. If the shells are open, they should close when you tap them. If they don't, they should be thrown away.
3. Make sure to pull off all the silks from the corn when husking them.
4. Keep a careful watch on the fire and make sure if children are in attendance that they stay far away from the fire.
5. Finally, be careful of your alcohol intake. Food always tastes better when the chef is aware of the actual preparation of the ingredients. Under-cooking or over-cooking can ruin hours of planning and waste lots of money.

And if all else fails, just hire a local caterer. Contact Capt. The Hidden Harvest At Quail Hill

This is the first part of a two part story.

There's a mystique about Quail Hill, the farm nestled in the folds of land off Amagansett's Deep Lane, an extra insider enticement for spending warm months in The Hamptons. It hasn't hurt Quail Hill's image that environmentally-conscious names like Paul McCartney, Chevy Chase, Christie Brinkley and Alec Baldwin have participated in this Community Sponsored Agriculture farm, or CSA, at one point or another. Then there's Quail Hill's director Scott Chaskey, to some minds a near-celebrity himself, whose passport reads "poet-farmer." Viking Press is publishing Chaskey's reflections on the land This Common Ground in spring 2005.

Scott Chaskey

Quail Hill is as much perception and mood as reality for 195 families who can buy a season's share of the farm's harvest and pick their own produce. There is the perception that its vegetables taste better than anything you can buy in most markets. Most of the farm's deep and nuanced flavors disappeared from agribusiness fields long ago. Members love to cook. "Why else would you join?" asked one woman last year, looking up from digging small, delicately-flavored turnips she planned to slice raw in a salad. Others are drawn as much by the act of harvesting and a reconnection with the land as they are by the food they harvest.

Across the U.S., a grassroots CSA movement is planting flavors weeded out by agribusiness. Dr. Daniel Lass, with the Dept. of Resource Economics of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, who has been studying CSAs since 1996, estimated one-quarter of a million Americans today are eating the bounty from as many as 1,500 CSAs. Most, but not all, are organic.

When the bushy-bearded, soft-spoken Chaskey stops by the farm's wooden kiosk, where the blackboard lists which vegetables can be harvested as twice-weekly share allotments, members snag him. Talk ranges from philosophy, to the essential microbial life in the soil to what rotten luck that potato beetles destroyed last summer's first eggplant crop, and deer, all the okra.

The harvesting season will begin next weekend with asparagus, rhubarb, lettuces, young greens, radishes and herbs. Bounties swell as weeks pass. Later, there will be multiple varieties of almost everything grown by Chaskey and a staff of apprentices, neglected flavors and textures seldom found commerically: peas and fava beans, a half-dozen different cucumbers, a half-dozen eggplants, a dozen peppers, 42 varieties of tomatoes. By the peak of harvest, each visit will yield members two or three big sacks of produce, a seasonal total of 225 varieties of vegetables, herbs and flowers. The price tag is exceptional. The weekly pro-rated cost of a seasonal share in the farm's harvest is about $25, and depends upon when the first hard winter freeze arrives.

An absence of chemicals is one of the main reasons Americans join CSAs, according to Martha Cornwell, director of the Robin Van En Center for CSA resources, an information clearing center in Chambersburg, PA.

There is not only the perception among members that Quail Hill produce is healthier because it is free of pesticides, preservatives and most chemicals, but that it is more nutritious. Scant hard data supports this. Until recent investments by big agriculture in organics, few companies with sufficient funds had a vested interest in researching the question.

Said harvest member Paul Bresnick, a Manhattan literary agent and former book editor (Simon & Schuster, Henry Holt, Doubleday and William Morrow), "The idea of getting our nutrients from foods that we knew were organically grown becames very important and satisfying to us. We gradually stopped taking any supplements or pills. We stopped taking vitamins and all the other stuff."

Non-members can taste Quail Hill produce at some local restaurants including Amagansett's Estia Cantina, and Nick and Tony's, as well as at East Hampton's private Ross School, The Springs General Store, and often through Meals-on-Wheels.

Some summer shares at Quail Hill are still available through the Peconic Land Trust in Southampton, along with shares for winter 04-05. Tel. 631-283-3195.

Confessions of a RESTAURATEUR by Fred Lieberman

Moe's Back!...

After graduating from college in the sixties, I was living with my parents on Long Island waiting to be called into active duty in the army. My main job at the time was as a chauffeur, driving my father and his three cronies to New York every day for work. Like clockwork every morning we stopped for breakfast at Moe's luncheonette on 32nd street and Fifth Avenue in Manhattan. My father paid for my breakfast, which I soon discovered was in lieu of a salary. One day, after about two months, Moe came to our table and announced that he had sold his luncheonette and was moving to Florida. We wished him luck. Both my father, also named Moe, and George Plachter, displayed some private envy at this pronouncement.

About a month after the luncheonette changed hands my Father and his friends decided they didn't like Moe's anymore. It had, they concluded, gone down hill. The eggs weren't as fresh, the waitresses not as pretty and the prices were higher. Mostly, (in my opinion) they concluded, the prices were higher. So it was decided that we would begin eating breakfast at a diner in Valley Stream and drive directly to work from there. George got off at 28th and Fifth, Jack at 21st and Fifth, and my dad at 21st and Sixth. He got door-to-door service. That's why I was able to use the car.

Anyway, I went into the Army as a Second Lieutenant, an MP no less. In less than two months I was back, having been kicked out due to a bad knee. My job was waiting for me.

On this particular day, while heading south on Fifth Ave from 35th Street, I noticed from more than two blocks away that Moe's luncheonette had a giant white paper sign covering the huge glass window on the 32nd street side and facing the oncoming Fifth Avenue traffic. I could see the giant lettering but was not close enough to read it. It was impossible not to see it and as we approached less than a block away Joe said: "What the hell is that?" Everyone looked as I slowed the car. In big twenty-four inch red letters, there it was: "MOE'S BACK!"

"Moe's back? What the hell does that mean?" inquired my dad.

"Moe is back," stated Jack matter of factly. "Hey, that's great."

"You think that's great?" offered Joe, king of the one-liners. "Let me tell you something. MOE DON'T WANNA TO BE BACK!" Of course Moe didn't want to be back. The buyer wasn't paying his notes. He had to come back. It was 1965.

I sold my restaurant, The Farmhouse in East Hampton, in May 2003. May 19th to be exact. I slipped away to Maine to set up house and spent precious little time at the restaurant mainly because the new owner didn't want me around. He could "handle everything himself" is what he informed me. I remember thinking at the time that when I went into business I always wanted as many people surrounding me who I felt were smarter than me that I could find. Apparently not Marty. I buried that thought in the back of my brain, hoping he knew what he was doing.

My agreement to sell the restaurant was somewhat complicated because we did the deal in less than two weeks. It was, after all, important for the buyer to take possession before Memorial Weekend. Fine with me. I was dying to spend the summer with my boys. We couldn't have the actual "closing" before he received the all-important Liquor License. I asked for, and received, a very strongly worded "personal guarantee" to cover all the money he was to owe me. "Very well worded," said my attorney in New York, who acted as an advisor to me.

I noticed that the new owner's ads never talked about the food but rather the "Happy Hour" on the lawn and stuff like that. He raised the drink prices almost to the moon. Even too expensive for the Hamptons! Then the ads talked about the $3 beers instead of the "best food in the Hamptons," It wasn't only not a good idea but I didn't think he could do that according to our agreement. He did it anyway. And he went on, dancing to his own drummer. Meanwhile he was paying the rent and was about to owe me a very huge note payment. Guess what? You're right! See you in court, Marty.

On November 15, 2003, the Suffolk County Supreme Court Judge issued us a Temporary Restraining Order (TRO); the first step to giving me back my restaurant. Oh gosh. Need I say more? Ten days later, at a hearing in front of the same judge, I was granted a permanent Injunction and he ordered Marty to get out of the restaurant – IMMEDIATELY. Do NOT set foot in the restaurant. Immediately wasn't soon enough. He hadn't paid me. This, after milking the money from the Farmhouse during the Hamptons' four strongest months.

The third customer to come into the restaurant after my return had no idea that I was going to be there. He took one look at me and shouted to his wife: "Suzie, guess what: FRED'S BACK!" All I could think of was poor Moe from 32nd Street, thirty-five years earlier. Now this 2004 version of "Moe" was back again, too. But did I wanna be back? Truth be known, this "Moe" wanted to be back. It's where I belonged. Plus my attorneys told me I would also get paid my money from Marty.

... Fred's back!

Iraq

This Iraq situation, in my opinion, is completely out of hand. I simply just do not get what the heck it is that we are trying to do there and I feel like nobody else does, either. Does anybody else feel this way? Obviously, there are people that feel this way and are starting to talk about it. You sit down at dinner, the conversation goes from the Sopranos, to Troy, then to President Bush and then to Iraq. I really enjoy the Iraq conversation because I am against the war in Iraq. The great thing about talking about Iraq when you are against it is the fact that you always win the conversation. You never lose.

It just seems that at this point in the war, absolutely nobody can really justify any reason for us being there. We are just sort of there, at this point. We went in with weapons of mass destruction as our let's go to war card, along with some 9-11 hatred and now, with every passing day, more and more people are realizing that it makes no sense to be there currently, and it made no sense to go there in the first place.

You know the other thing that really makes me mad? It is that nobody really likes to talk about the fact that the real reason we went there in the first place is because the entire country of Iraq lies on a bed of oil. The reason nobody likes to talk about this, especially the pro war people who say "it is our responsibility to liberate the poor people of Iraq", is because they know how messed up and wrong it is. I can tell you right now, if North Korea was made out of diamonds and Iraq sat on a bed of sewage, we would be "liberating the poor people of North Korea." In fact, we could have even justified it. North Korea has nuclear bombs.

You can obviously make the point that it is just speculation and there is no fact to it. But as far as I can tell, we went there for the oil and pretended like we were going there for something else and that is that.

So now we are in this jam. America has pretty much dug itself into a hole and our solution to getting out of this hole can be summarized in a movie quote by Jim Carrey from the movie Dumb and Dumber, "We are in a hole, we just have to dig ourselves out."

So okay fine, I don't even care. We are America, right? We've got a huge army and planes and lasers and stuff. We can invade a country, completely change a society of 25,000,000 people and the political views of a small country like Iraq? Hell, we can take on the whole Middle East, right? I mean, we are America; we won World War II, for crying out loud.

I thought about this, and yes, our army does kick butt. It is awesome, the best of the best and every soldier of ours could probably kill ten of theirs. Look at the casualty count in Vietnam. We slaughtered them, we won that war, in a way. We may not have changed anything, but we showed them where it counts.

The fact of the matter is that America's armed forces are not limitless. I did a little research and found out that we have 1.4 million active soldiers in the US armed forces. 487,000 of them are in the Army, 385,000 in the Navy, 368,000 in the Air Force and 174,000 in the Marines. There are 150,000 troops spread around the world keeping stuff in line and there are 180,000 troops in Iraq. Iraq has 25,000,000 people and the majority of them (12.5 million of them or more) want the US to get the hell out of Iraq and never come back. That is a little scary. I don't see how 180,000 US soldiers can change the minds of millions and millions of Iraqis.

So, like I said, we are in this hole and we are pouring more and more dead American soldiers into it, nearly 800 dead and 6000 seriously wounded at last count. Every single day that goes by a couple more are added to this growing list. We are sacrificing all of these kids and nobody really knows why. Liberate Iraq? What does this mean? Do you honestly think that all of Iraq is just going to be okay with this? Of course not. People are going to keep getting killed until we leave them alone.

This is war though. I guess that means people are supposed to die, right? And if you are a soldier and risking your life, of course I am going to support you. It is not your fault that you are over there. I am not going to throw eggs at you when you come home. I am going to be really glad that you are back safe. I am going to be happy that you made it through a war that should never have happened. I am going to be happy that you made it through a war that inspires terrorists on a daily basis. I am going to be happy that you made it through a war that made no sense.

The Business of Learning

Michael Koffler has become an expert in the market of starting schools. He began running schools in the 1980s with his wife, a speech pathologist. It's not something we usually think of as a business, but it takes the same kind of mentality: you see a need and you fill it. This is how Koffler's mind worked when he graduated from SUNY Buffalo with degrees in business administration and accounting, and this is how it continues to work as he opens his forty-seventh and forty-eighth private schools. This September, The Aaron School opens on 45th Street in Manhattan and next year, the Claremont Academy will be open in lower Manhattan. That application process begins in September 2004.

Michael Koffler

The Aaron School is a special needs private school, serving nursery and elementary aged children. The school is well-equipped, featuring 13 classrooms, computer labs, libraries, music, art, ceramics, and physical education. The school aims at helping students with learning disabilities, attention deficit disorder, and language delays. Koffler realized that this school would be in high demand through his experience running the Claremont School on the West side of the city, since 2001. He saw that 10-15% of families at the Claremont School have a child with a developmental issue, and that these families were having difficulties finding nursery schools for their children. When he saw that need, Koffler decided to fill it with the Aaron School. It is already completely booked for the coming year.

Though the Aaron School is a private facility and enjoys all the benefits that come with this status, Koffler emphasizes that parents can get funded for it if they are able to go through a process with the City that proves that their child fits into one of a variety of circumstances, In that case, they can be reimbursed for about 70% of the tuition.

It is obvious that Koffler doesn't take much time to come up for air. Even as the Aaron School prepares for its first term, he is busy readying his newest school, the Claremont Academy. This is an interesting undertaking. The school is in the Wall Street area, and Koffler plans to utilize that location to the fullest. It will be kindergarten through 8th, with the majority of students in 6-8th grades. The area is ripe for such a market because of the devastation after September 11. There is a huge availability rate of buildings, and the fact that Wall Street has not been a 24-hour community since that time begs for a school. According to Koffler, there are no Middle Schools below Canal Street. Again, he saw the need and decided to fill it.

His dreams for this school are progressive. He plans to bring in professionals from the area to talk to the students about economics, capitalism, and the stock market. The Claremont Academy will be a full mainstream school, influenced by methods from the Princeton Review. John Katzman, who runs the Princeton Review, will be working with the curriculum of the Claremont Academy. Of course, these methods will be altered to fit the younger students, but Koffler believes that incorporating ideas from the Princeton Review will help kids achieve better on standardized tests.

Koffler works hard to put a great program in place and then to let it flourish on its own. He visits to make sure everything is running smoothly, but he generally seems to put a lot of confidence in the people he hires. He consults with school leaders privately concerning admissions and staff, but he generally takes pride in the fact that he is very respectful of the people he hires.

Since Koffler has opened so many schools, I was interested in learning about how they differ. He said that he caters to the neighborhood. Some schools are more diverse than others, and some are more expensive. However, he tries to keep a level of multiculturalism in all of his schools through his extensive scholarship program. He encourages teachers who speak more than one language, particularly in his schools in Brooklyn and Queens, where the students are from various backgrounds. He finds that in his Manhattan schools, much of his job is catering to parents and assuring them that their children are getting quality educations.

The application process in Manhattan private schools today is almost as intense as college applications. The competition is fierce and the options are varied. Michael Koffler is always aware of what is needed and how he can improve. His business is education, and his mission is to deliver quality.

–Emily J Weitz

The application process for the Claremont Academy begins September 7, 2004. For more information, contact Michael Koffler at mkoffler@metschools.com or call 212 826 5905.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

After a long hard winter, a long hot summer is most welcomed. Memorial Day shopping is a blast. All the shops are geared for summertime living, so let's do some summertime shopping!

Bob Stevens Appliances & T.V. on Old Riverhead Road in Westhampton Beach is having a dynamite sale on Weber outdoor gas grills. There is free delivery and assembly with any Weber gas grill purchase. No one likes to put a grill together, that's for sure!

Porch & Patio on Montauk Highway in East Quogue is having a "Memorial Day Event" sale on (in stock merchandise) Lloyd Flanders, Brown Jordan, Winston, Hanamint and more. This store is really stuffed to the max with great outdoor living items including grills, umbrellas, and so much more.

Waterstone Fine Pottery on Mariner Drive in Southampton has over 3,000 wholesale priced terracotta, fiberglass, glazed, cement and metal planters from all over the world that would look just de-vine in your backyard, patio or home. All colors, shapes and sizes are available; stop in and check this one out.

Make it a point to stop by La Vie Designer Resale located behind the Water Mill Post Office, right across from Mirko's Restaurant, in Water Mill, to check on the huge sale this coming weekend to celebrate Memorial Day. Almost everything in the shop is marked 50% off or more! Jil Sander skirts $45, Prada pants $60, suits from $30, slip dresses from $10, jeans for $10, and the cutest sandals and handbags at rock bottom prices. And don't pass up the great selection of handcrafted jewelry for your summer wardrobe. The shop is open Thursday through Saturday from 12 noon to 7 p.m., Sunday and Monday Memorial day from noon to 5 p.m. Give a call at 537-2769.

Christian K. Andrews on Tradesman Path, off Butter Lane in Bridgehampton, is showing off the one-of-a-kind collection of bronze and table lamps, armoires, cabinets, chests, altar tables, coffee tables, chairs, candles and accessories. The contemporary selection of bronze artifacts is something to write home about, for sure.

Items available at Mandala Boutique

On Amagansett Square in Amagansett sits Mandala Studio, where Jolie, the owner, holds Yoga classes. She has now added a Mandala Boutique to her space in the shop that is literally filled to the brim with great summer clothing. There is a nice selection of dresses, skirts, pants, sweaters, yoga clothing, yoga mats, purses, undergarments, Indian bedspreads, accessories and some vegan treats. Some of the brand names include clothing from Johnny, Hard Tail, camouflage shirts and terry short shorts, Sweet Pea and Woo (that are made in the softest and most comfortable fabrics imaginable). You would think that they are made from butter and heavy cream they are so luxurious. Also available at the Mandala Boutique are the colorful Mary Jane oil cloth totes and soft coolers. The moment you walk through the door for a yoga class, you will be surprised at the splash of rich summer colors and casual clothing that make you feel good as well as look good.

On the North Fork: And...if you're getting ready to sit on the beach and catch some rays, make sure you look your very best this summer. California Sunshine Swimwear Super Store at Tanger II Outlet Center has over 10,000 swimsuits with matching cover-ups, wraps and mix and match separates to choose from in sizes extra small to 40E...There are fashions in designer, contemporary, junior pre-teen, long torso and from size 18 to 26. The year round cruise-wear is also available at discount prices.

While you're at Tanger II, step into spring and summer at Escada Company Store and catch an up to 80% off sale on selected merchandise of woman's clothing and accessories throughout the Memorial Day weekend.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping! Have a safe and fun Memorial Day weekend.

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops, sales or where to find something special, please email me at: shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at 631-537-0500. I would love to hear from you...

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

A totally uncommon shopping destination for your summer home and garden will be launched at the Target Bullseye Inn that will be open to the public (for a limited time), from Friday, May 28 through July 4, 2004.

The Bullseye Inn, located at 2546 Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton, will have everything you need to outfit your summer home and garden. Offerings include exclusive creations such as Swell by Cynthia Rowley and Ilene Rosenzweig's colorful and chic melamine dishes, table linens, bath accessories, bedding, rugs, toss pillows and more. From nurseryman Sean Conway, create easy and inviting outdoor spaces with effortless and elegant pots, planters, outdoor décor and lighting. Simply Shabby Chick by Rachel Ashwell allows you to decorate a summer home with lovely mix and match-able bedding, table linens, window treatments and bath accessories. David Kirk's Sunny Patch characters, including Miss Spider, Lily Ladybug and Huck Grasshopper, appearing on garden tools, boots, games, and sprinklers. Other summer standards offered with sizzling style include grills and barbecue accessories, backyard games, beach towels, patio furniture and more.

This summer, spot shop will surprise and delight you, as it captures the latest summer trends, with everything needed to set up a summer home, fun in the backyard, at the beach and by the bonfire.

The hours of operation are Saturday through Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and from 12 noon to 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday. For information you can call 800-440-0680.

On Thursday, May 27, renowned French designer Catherine Malandrino will be opening her new boutique in the heart of East Hampton's shopping destination, 27 Newtown Lane.

The ambiance of the 1,000 square foot store encompasses the spirit of Brigitte Bardot's house, "La Madrague," located in Saint-Tropez during the 60s. The boutique, like "La Madrague," will be the "It" social destination, evoking an aura of "sea, sex and sun." High gloss citrus yellow walls, an oversized divan, lemon ultra suede curtains and bedding, shocking pink mannequins and French doors leading to a courtyard garden define the Catherine Malandrino St. Tropez-Hamptons fusion.

"This is exciting for us," said Catherine Malandrino. "We wanted the interior to feel luxurious and vibrant. We were looking to convey the glamour of a French Riviera boat party where you would meet your favorite screen idol from the 60s, like Romy Schneider or Brigitte Bardot."

The store will feature exclusive designs such as hand-crocheted bikinis and dresses, Fedora straw hats in lace and checks, beach towels, macramé leather bags and the Catherine Malandrino Limited Edition collection. In addition, patrons will find a selection of Catherine's favorite French films and music such as La Piscine, Bonjour Tristesse, Et Dieu Crea la Femme and musician Serge Gainsbourg.

For information call 631-329-6990 or www.catherinemalandrino.com

Manhattanite Regina Pugliese, who also lives on the open bay in Hampton Bays, and her fiancee/partner Bob Fee, have just opened a home décor boutique called the Graceful Swan.

A Marketing Manager for Turner Construction Company for the past twenty-five years, Regina opened this store because she loves to decorate and enjoys being around all beautiful things for the home. Hoping that she will be just as successful in her second career as she was in her first, the shop reflects her love for the home retail business.

Her partner, Robert Fee, is the retired President & CEO of Turner Construction Company. Since his retirement in December of 2003, he remained on the Board of Directors of The Turner Corporation and is currently doing consulting for Turner and some of their subsidiaries. However, he too enjoys being surrounded by the finer things, and works in the store on occasion, helping Regina out when needed.

Located at 544 Montauk Highway in East Quogue (631-653-9006), this beautiful shop offers a variety of lovely high end home items and accessories. Some of the designer items the shop features are: Crabtree & Evelyn, Susy Chen and Tracy Porter. There is also lovely selection of pottery, garden items, kitchen, baskets, china, dinnerware, linens, candles, silver, lace, hand bags and beyond bath and collectibles.

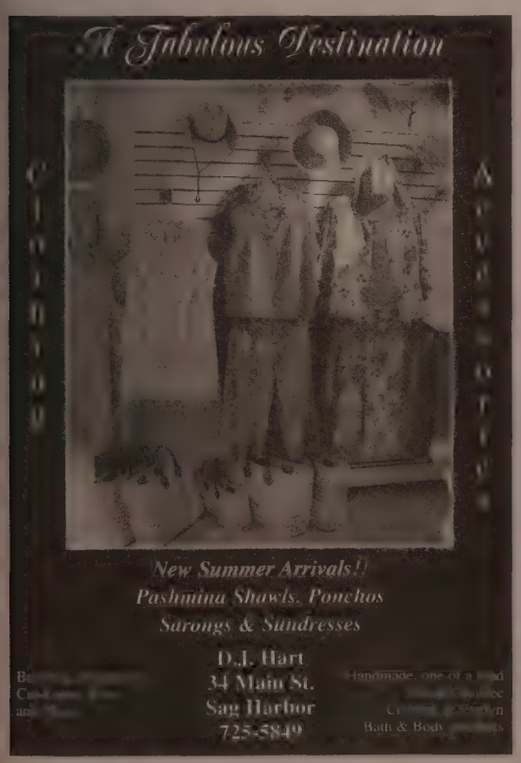

"I'm thinking and am hopeful that Graceful Swan will be beneficial not only for the people of East Quogue, but Westhampton Beach, Quogue and Hampton Bays...perhaps even some Southampton people, some of whom have visited the store and said, "It's beautiful. I'll be back again!" Regina explained.

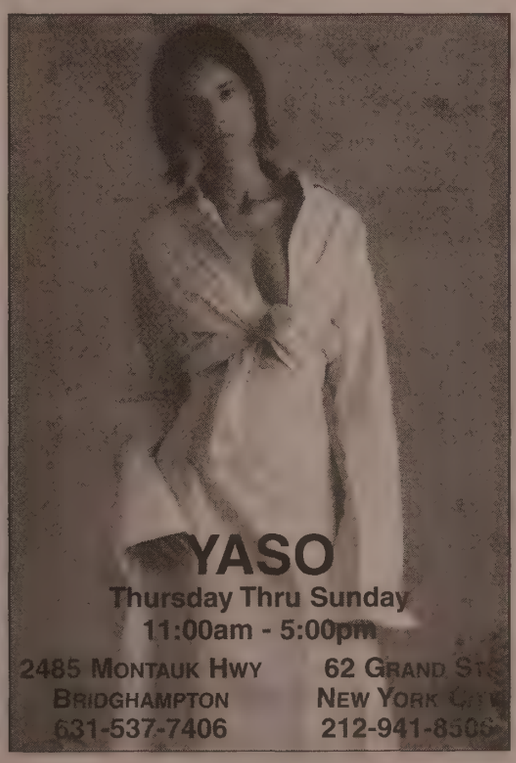

"Perhaps the town of East Quogue is on its way to becoming a home decor town like Eastport is the 'town of antiques'... Especially with other stores in town like Cottage and Respectable Collectibles...which also have a lot to offer," she added.

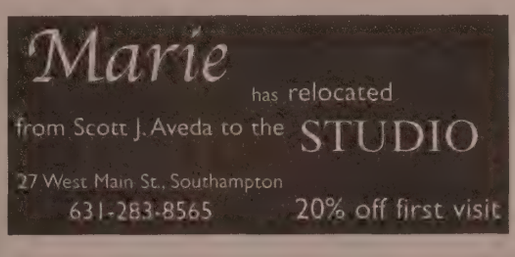

The Graceful Swan is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Safety In The Woods On A Hike

There are no poisonous snakes or ferocious carnivores to be wary of on Long Island trails. Nonetheless, it may be helpful to keep in mind some of the common hazards you may encounter while hiking on Long Island. In sub-freezing weather, after a rain or snow, the trails may be icy. It's best not to hike under these conditions. Also, stay out of the woods on very windy days, as trees or large branches could be falling. In cold weather always dress in layers and regulate your body temperature by adding or removing them. Wear wool or synthetic fibers. Avoid wearing cotton next to your skin on cold days, as it can wick heat away rapidly if it becomes wet. Always wear a warm hat and gloves in the winter and a hat with a brim in the summer.

The issue of ticks is an important one to be aware of on Long Island. Wear light colored clothing and a hat. If you pick up ticks, they will be easier to see. Brushing against bushes or high grasses is the most common way that people pick up ticks. They will walk around on you for a while, searching for an appropriate place before they attach themselves. Ticks can be found in any outdoor location with vegetation; many people pick them up while gardening or playing in their own backyards. If you are walking on a well-maintained trail, you can decrease the chance of picking up one of these unwelcome passengers by staying in the center of the path. Ticks can be active anytime of the year, including a warm winter day. In heavily infested areas it is a good idea to tuck your pants into white socks, and check yourself and a partner periodically. If you see one on you or a friend, don't be afraid to grab it between your fingers and flick it away.

Ticks do not sting, bite, or jump. The process of a tick connecting to your skin is a relatively slow one. If you pay attention, you will have plenty of time to find them and remove them. If you aren't allergic to insect repellent, spraying your clothes from your shoes to just above your knees may be prudent. Some people have bad reactions to insect repellent, so try a small amount at first and apply it in an area away from other people. When you return home from a hike always check your body and your clothes carefully for ticks. It is also advisable to launder your clothes after a hike or put your clothes in a dryer on a high setting for twenty minutes. Be aware that a deer tick can be as small as a pinhead, while a dog tick can be a little larger than a sesame seed. The best way to remove a tick once it has become attached to you is with fine-tipped tweezers. Grab the tick at its head, as close to the skin as possible and firmly tug. Do not squeeze the tick's abdomen, and do not apply petroleum jelly to remove it. A tick bite does not cause disease unless the tick is infected. It can take as much as 36 hours after the tick has started feeding for any disease it may be carrying to be transferred to your bloodstream. After removing the tick, watch to see if a rash develops near the site of removal. If so, contact your doctor. Antibiotics, when prescribed in a timely manner, are effective in treating tick-borne diseases.

Chiggers can be picked up in grassy areas most often near water. They create itchy bumps that may persist for weeks. They are most commonly picked up mid-calf or lower and they look like tiny dots. Heavy application of insect repellent around sneakers and socks works to repel them. One time I saw them on my pants and was saved by having some isopropyl alcohol and a rag with me. I had brought these supplies in order to experiment with removing graffiti and was very gratified to find that quickly wiping them off my pants with the alcohol soaked rag worked very well. Alcohol works well in removing these larval mites before they burrow into the skin but won't help after they have done so. Fortunately, even though chiggers cause fierce itching, they do not transmit diseases and they do eventually disappear.

Wearing a hat is a good idea for a number of reasons. It will keep the sun and sweat out of your eyes, and insects out of your hair. It is also important to know what a poison ivy plant looks like, so you can avoid it. I often carry Tecnu in my backpack, a special cleansing agent that dissolves the oils of poison ivy.

The one thing you must always take on a hike is water. Carry more water than you think you will need. On longer hikes, it is also important to bring along some food for an energy boost and to replenish your electrolytes. If you follow these simple safety precautions, you should have a fun and hassle-free hike!

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

A dangerous summer? For car enthusiasts and drivers in general, summer can be risky business. Take killer trees, not killer bees, for instance. I am not talking about the trees that seem to jump out in front of your car on occasion. I'm talking about the trees that drop all sorts of unpleasantness onto one of your most prized possessions, your automobile. Don't be a sap and let sap fall on your car. Tree sap is literally one of the most difficult things in the world to remove from a car's paint. Even professional detailers have trouble. Then there are the birds. It is thought that they evolved from dinosaurs, a fact I find hard to believe when I see those cute little robins hopping around my yard. However, from the size of some of the bird droppings that appear on the surface of my cars, I am rethinking my beliefs. It is the revenge of the dinosaurs. By the way, bird droppings are full of acid and if left on a car's paint too long, can actually burn the surface. Get rid of it as soon as possible. It is also another reason not to park under killer trees. Birds do seem to congregate in them.

Try to steer clear of small people driving giant SUVs. Maybe it is my imagination, but it seems the bigger the vehicle, the smaller the head behind the wheel. It must be an optical illusion. Because the vehicle is so big in comparison, the head and torso of the driver look small. What little investigation I have done into this phenomenon suggests that, much of the time, small people do indeed exit these large vehicles. I say avoid SUVs because most of them handle like the Exxon Valdez and use about as much fuel. In an emergency avoidance maneuver, you certainly do not want to be next to one in any highway lane.

Probably, the most dangerous facet of SUV driving revolves around those beautiful blondes in Range Rovers. It seems every time I see a Rover, there's the blonde behind the wheel, in full "Hamptons mode," totally preoccupied with everything except driving. Look out, these drivers are more dangerous than Uma Thurman.

Big danger lurks when old folks drive large sedans, like a Ford Crown Victoria or a Mercury Marquis. Why do they drive these things? Like their drivers, these two cars are a little dated in every facet of their design. The scary thing is, for some bizarre reason, these are the same cars that the police drive, but at least the police have reflexes that work. Ever try to pass a senior citizen going 30 miles per hour in a 50 mile per hour zone on a two-lane highway? Dangerous, and all too common. If the car is festooned with various hats in the rear window and has Florida plates, be doubly careful.

What about those cars that have bumper stickers with weird slogans like "I brake for animals?" These people are obviously idiots. At the very least, super nerds. Who on earth cares if these morons brake for animals? Most of us, hopefully, don't deliberately aim at a squirrel in the road. Another wacko bumper sticker is "Baby on Board," or even worse, "Show Dogs on Board." Lucky I saw your bumper sticker, guy, because without it, I was planning to T-bone you at 90 miles per hour, to see if my air bags work. What goes on in these people's minds? The point of all this is that if there are weirdo bumper stickers on a car, assume that the driver is a bit strange and possibly unpredictable.

Really rich people in Bentleys. Stay away from them. Several years ago I had a guy in a Bentley convertible run me off the road. The scary thing is that he didn't even realize that he had done it. He was too busy gesturing wildly to his buddy in the passenger seat. He certainly wasn't driving. Be aware of the "I'm richer than you" syndrome that effects some drivers in their truly expensive cars. They think they can get away with anything, especially bad driving.

Wet roads. I am not kidding about this. For some odd reason, after a rain, the roads in the Hamptons get very, very slick, especially if it has not rained in a while. I have personally gone into some horrific skids in the best cars, on the best tires available, on the roads of the Hamptons. No, I wasn't speeding. I do believe the summer heat brings the asphalt's oil to the surface, mixing with water, to form an extremely dangerous surface. Please slow down in the rain. Dangerous when wet here in the Hamptons.

OK, I have insulted SUV drivers, little people, beautiful blondes, Bentley owners, senior citizens and even one of nature's miracles, the tree. All so much a part of the Hamptons' summer scene. As the locals say so cryptically each season, "They're back." Have a safe summer season and drive smart.

EAST END KIDS

HEADIN' EAST

By the time you read this page, my family and I will be settling into our summer home in Southampton, rarin' to go on a summer of fun in the Hamptons, which I hope to share with you all and hopefully see you at some of the events we'll be attending. So what are some fun activities for parents and kids? Don't go away because some of Emily Post's picks are coming. This is my second Hamptons summer and it will be tough to top last summer, when I went to some of the coolest charity events including: Super Saturday, went to Bridgehampton Polo although I preferred the Scotto's pizza to the polo at Polo, got on TV with the Schimizzi's Hamptons TV, even was on the Joan Hamburg Show at her home in Bridgehampton and topped off the season at the Hampton Classic, thanks to Melissa Cohn and Manhattan Mortgage. By the way, these are not product placements; these are hints so I get invited again this year...

So what are some of the activities for Summer '04?

You know, the local libraries are not just stocked with books. They also have terrific activities for kids of all ages. My local library (Rogers Memorial Library in Southampton) has lots of events (283-0774).

Charities are doing more and more kid's days because there are just more kids in the Hamptons. Check with Dan's Papers for their calendar. I went to five of them last year and they were great fun. It is a good way to do some networking just like our parents do.

There are classes in every town for music and dance (example: Music Together in Southampton which I went to last summer) to soccer classes for little ones (soccersuperstars.com) starting in the Hamptons this year.

The Hamptons Baby Beach Club is a new concept for families and kicks off this summer.

There's the Children's Museum of the East End (537-8250), which has some fun programs.

Since they say the best things in life are free... each town has at least one night a week where families gather in the park and the town has a band for people to dance, sing along or an eat along picnic. Always a great way to meet other families.

And the Hamptons arguably have the world's best beaches so bring your pail and shovel or your surfboard depending upon your age and athletic ability, and hit those beaches, but don't forget the sunscreen!

See ya!

Please send events and ideas to my agent and dad david@nextpert.com

REGISTER NOW!! Food, Drinks, T-shirts, Goody Bags and lots more...

Scleroderma is a chronic, often progressive autoimmune connective tissue disease - like rheumatoid arthritis, lupus, and multiple sclerosis - in which the body's immune system attacks its own tissue. The disease which literally means "hard skin" can cause thickening and tightening of skin, as well as serious damage to internal organs. For some individuals, scleroderma is a nuisance. For others, it is a life-threatening disease. And, although medications can sometimes help, there is no cure yet.

They're More Than Just Your Average Blue Jeans

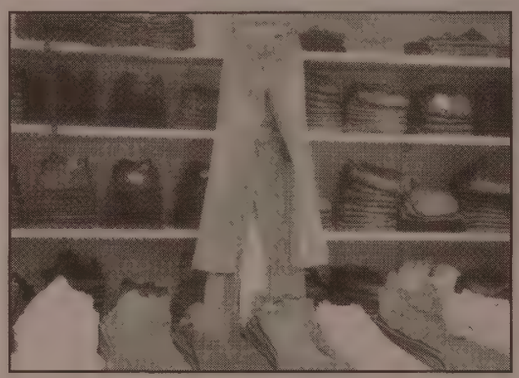

If cotton is known as the "fabric of our lives," then denim or "jean" fabric which is made of cotton, must follow suit. Levi-Strauss & Co. designed the first pair of jeans, known as "overalls," in 1880. Since that time, jeans have certainly embarked on a long and ever-changing journey into the fashion world. What started as a durable fabric to make uniforms for miners, farmers and other hard labor related occupations costing only $1.25 a pair, has blossomed into designer couture for Hollywood icons, rock-stars and the wealthy elite averaging between $150 and $300. And that does not include really high-end couture designs.

Today, the latest in jean design trends showcase a more tattered, washed-out vintage look. There are many new lines by such brands as Seven, AG and Paper Denim that offer a variety of styles and unique designs that make your options seem endless. I think for most shoppers, regardless of price, it all comes down to comfort and fit. However, during my younger years when I had my "fashion training wheels" on, it was another story.

My first interest in jeans began between my pre-teen and teenage years. I'm revealing my age somewhat, but who cares. Those embarrassing fashion fauxpas will eternally provide us with funny visuals and fond memories of a few personal fashion disasters. And, for part two of this article, we'll discuss frightening hairstyles. Just kidding!

The late 70s and early 80s brought us the "Jordache Look;" those cool Sergio Valentes and "Ooh, la, la Sassoon!" Who can forget those commercials? And then, there was Calvin Klein; with his breakthrough Brooke Shields ad campaign, he set the tone for the future of fashion advertising. Let's face it, flirting and enticing the public sells, and a great pair of form fitting jeans on a "Super Model" doesn't hurt either. Just ask Andie MacDowell. Her career was launched after appearing in another of Calvin's campaigns.

In order to get a better understanding of the jean market today, I decided to do a little research. In East Hampton, Scoop on Newtown Lane offers an assortment of the latest in jeans that include James, Yanuk,

Jeans at Henry Lehr in East Hampton

Citizens of Humanity, Seven, Paper Denim, Chip and Peppers, Earl Jeans and Habitual to name a few. Retail Director of Scoop Renee Cucurullo told me they offer a wide variety of styles and brands so that everyone can find that perfect fit. "It all depends on your body type," said Renee. Every brand they carry varies slightly according to the fit you're comfortable wearing.

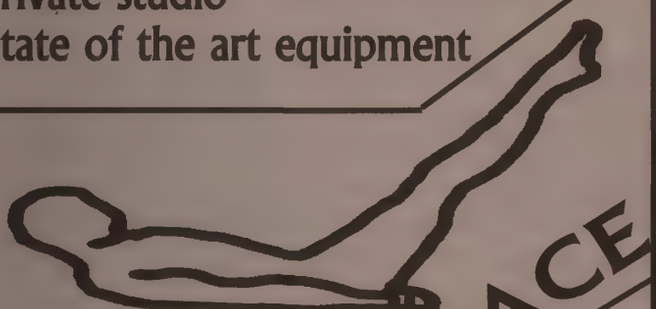

At Henry Lehr, also in East Hampton, I chatted with Melissa DeWaters, the store manager, about the brands they carry. From Paper Denim and Rogan to a few new lines by Oliver Twist, Saddle Lights and Kunna, they have an abundance of choices. Melissa explained that they like to offer the latest designs and styles. One can even find a pair of rare Vintage Levis if you've been on a quest. Each brand stands on their own and offers something unique in style, whether it's the pocket, stitching or degree of wash.

Considering the jean market is approximately an $11 billion dollar industry, it's wide open for designers to make a lot of money. On the opposite and more affordable side of the jean spectrum, The Gap has attracted consumers with quality and style that has contributed to setting the standard for a dependable pair of jeans. The Gap offers slim fit jeans in tinted vintage, faded and authentic washes with fits including boot cut and stretch boot cut as well as low rise and long and lean styles. Prices average $49 to $58.

Jeans are not only worn as part of casual attire; they can be dressed up. By matching your favorite pair of Prada or Manolo Blahniks, you can create a whole new theme. Besides, a little heel will add a longer and leaner line while making your butt look great!

Jeans are adaptable to almost any style. The old reliable form-fitting tee is always a fun classic look. Wearing a solid or patterned sundress over a pair of your favorite jeans can dress up your enemble as well. Try a bright jacket, tube top or flowy peasant top on for size. Calypso and Renaissance in Southampton carry several great options. For the summer, simple layered tank tops and a pair of flip-flops will be perfect. Fifteen year-old Brooke Shields said it best, "Nothing comes between me and my Calvin's," in a 1980 TV ad. Today she could say "me and my Seven's, Habituals, Chip and Peppers, etc." –Kelly Krieger

Illuminations by Barbara Jo Howard

A Brow Beating of Significant Proportion

I began this column with the intention of waxing euphoric over the perfect brow. However, it quickly turned into a hair-raising tale of confession, defeat and self-deceit.

The scene is a "chic chic la la" salon in a place we East Enders refer to as "up island." But, I found it well worth the trip as Lisa had done a remarkable job shaping my brows for years.

Eyebrows are tough. I cannot tell you the importance of having brows that actually accentuate one's face. It simply will not do to have arches that are peaked liked silhouettes of Aspen mountains, or thinned to a few sparse hairs.

Our faces are not symmetrical and so a good esthetician will give serious study to proportion and discuss expectations before giving recommendations and applying wax, tweezers or scissors. I used to laugh at how celebrities would pay top dollars and fly into LA exclusively to have their brows shaped by a certain artesian. I laugh no more.

My brows have never been easy. In my youth they rivaled Groucho's. I tried to apply tweezers, but couldn't see through the tears. Finally, my mother took me to have them waxed, and one was always shaped different than the other. For years, I thought it was just my face until by happenstance, I stumbled upon Lisa, and "Eureka!" for once had brows that were beautiful...thick but shaped with a nice arch and, most remarkable, balanced. No more coloring in the patches; rather, I just let them be. They were perfect. I beamed with pride.

I diligently returned to Lisa, time and time again, swearing my unyielding commitment as she stirred her magic pots. She laughed and said that after twenty years, she should get it right, and then swabbed on some wax, ripped and trimmed before confiding that she does 30 waxings a day. I was smug in my assurance that I was at last in the capable hands of an expert.

One day, I didn't review what I wanted. I was in a hurry and just allowed Lisa "to do her thing." It took only a few minutes and she admired her work before allowing me to see...and then the tears welled up as if I were thirteen. My brows were gone. They were plucked clean. There was absolutely nothing left but two scrawny lines. How could this happen?

Later, as I sat in Starbucks, hidden behind Jackie-O glasses, while downing a Venti Caramel Frappacino to medicate myself, I had to admit it was my fault. I had abdicated my responsibility. I did not describe exactly what I wanted. The direction to "just do the same" was not enough.

The proper brow should start just above the corner of one's eye and extend over the other end. The arch should slope just above the outside of the iris. If you wish for a more finished look, have the upper brow trimmed. For a more natural look, leave it alone.

So, here are my salon tips that can be applied to any treatment...whether it is brows, nails, hair styling, color, facial or massage. Take time to communicate your expectations. Discuss options and then be clear about what you want. Never, ever assume. No matter how long you have been going to a stylist: discuss, discuss, discuss. Be specific and focus on the task at hand. This is your time and you need to give directions. Don't allow any treatment to begin until you feel that you are being heard or you will be disappointed and have no one to blame but yourself. Be nice, but firm, and no one will lift a brow otherwise.

Clippity Clop with Ali Spencer

Although Hamptonites compete in horse shows all year round, the majority of shows (like the majority of other activities on The East End) take place between Memorial Day and Labor Day. The showing season culminates with The Hampton Classic, where the show jumping seems to take a back seat to the socializing going on under the Grand Prix tent. Although many flock to the Classic every year, only a few participate in the horse shows on the island that lead up to The Classic. And for all of the readers whose only experience with horse shows is The Hampton Classic, please allow me to pay tribute to the months of behind the scenes hard work and dedication that lead up to that one special week in late summer.

Ali Spencer

Once a rider's trainer has deemed him or her ready to compete in a horse show, the journey to the show grounds begins with a trip to Brennan's Bit & Bridle in Bridgehampton or Horse Haven in Southampton to buy the proper attire for the horse show. This attire includes britches, which are pants that generally make rubber feel like a breathable material, tall leather boots, the breaking in of which will leave you (both literally and figuratively) scarred for life, and a wool jacket. Wearing a wool jacket in the middle of the day in the middle of August in the middle of Long Island is not what anyone would describe as a good time. But such is the sacrifice that crazy equestrians gladly make for their sport.

And just as the rider must be outfitted, so must the horse, so to speak. The day before the show, the horse must first and foremost be bathed. This activity generally leaves the person bathing the horse as wet as the horse, but much less clean. There are many special sensations involved with bathing a horse that only a select and very fortunate few get to experience. My personal favorite is being swatted with a wet tail full of shampoo. Receiving such a tail swat can be very painful. Worse than that, all of this will have to be repeated in the pre-dawn hours before the show, as horses are quite skilled at dirtying a freshly bathed coat.

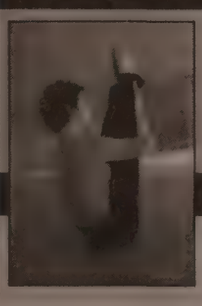

The day of the show often begins with bleary eyed parents waking their bleary eyed children at 5 o'clock in the morning, as horse shows generally begin at around 7 or 8 a.m. There is an upside to waking up this early, if you would like to look for one. The morning will seem idyllic – there will be a layer of fresh dew coating the lawn, rabbits will be hopping carefreely and the sun will be just peeking through the privet hedges. However, mother and rider will most likely be too busy running around making sure they have the left glove and right spur, and that you have directions to – what was that town? Yaphank (did the directions really say to take a left at the deli that sells curried goat)? But rest assured that one thing will most definitely not impede your commute to the horse show: At 6 a.m. on a Saturday morning you will never, ever have a problem making a left onto Montauk Highway.

The time spent at the horse show will go one of two ways. Scenario number one: You arrive at the show, finish all of your classes right away and are home again before you would normally be awake. Or, scenario number two: Hurry up and wait. And wait. And wait. There are two things you can do during this time. You can look for your left glove that you've lost again, or you can actually watch the show. Basically, there are three divisions at a horse show: "hunter," which is judged based on the form and performance of the horse; "equitation," judged on the position and style of the rider; and "jumper," which is timed rather than judged and based on the speed and agility of the horse.

When it is once again time to saddle your horse, you will most likely be asking yourself why you agreed to any of this at all, especially considering that your total time in the show ring will be about five minutes. The answer is simple. There is nothing like entering the show ring, cantering around your first course and feeling a mixture of doubt and excitement, not knowing if you can stay focused or if you will make a dumb mistake. And there is nothing like feeling your horse lift you up over the last jump and landing safely on the other side, knowing that you could not have ridden the course any better. You will pat your horse on his neck, smile, and look over at your trainer and see that she is also smiling. And on the drive home you will already have forgotten that you woke up at 5 a.m. and will be ready, even happy to do it all over again next time.

So, when you are at The Classic this year, strolling though the boutique garden or sipping champagne in the Grande Prix tent, take a moment to think about the hours spent in heat, dust, rain, mud and squadrons of flies. All of this to prepare for 5 minutes of glory spent jumping around the courses in Bridgehampton.

Nia Dance – Energize

Take the energy of aerobics, the awareness of yoga, the power of martial arts, and add to them a non-judgmental setting and freedom of expression. This is Nia dance, and it's the most fun way to keep your body sculpted, your mind clear, and your heart light.

Nia dance first emerged on the fitness scene in 1983 when Debbie Rosas, an aerobics instructor, and Carlos Rosas, a tennis instructor, decided to take a new approach to health and fitness. They saw the benefits of exercise through their respective specialties, but they also believed there was not enough focus on the mind. Nia dance is designed to be as fulfilling an experience for the mind and soul as for the body, like yoga. But for those who have found yoga too stretch-oriented and are looking for a more movement oriented experience, Nia dance may be the way to go.

Mandala Owner and instructor Jolie Parcher

I arrived at Mandala Studio in Amagansett, where owner Jolie Parcher teaches Nia classes on Wednesday and Sunday mornings. I must admit, I was a little nervous at first. I've been doing yoga for two years now, but this was a dance class! The last time I took dance I cried because my teacher, Miss Jacqueline, always tied my bun too tight, and after ballet class, my scalp would ache. So now, thirteen years later, I walked into another dance class.

The lights were soft and the silky curtains were filling with the damp breeze from outside. A few women were stretching. I started stretching too, trying to fend off flashbacks of mean ballerinas with the comfortable environment I now encountered. Jolie came into the room with a warm, open smile. I sighed and smiled back. A dance class with a yoga attitude. This could really be my style.

If there are two words to summarize Nia dance, they are "energy" and "freedom." You move with the music in the way your body wants to move, with the guidance of set steps that the instructor shows you. There were moments that were reminiscent of an aerobice class, but then the music would change and suddenly we were striking tae kwon do stances. Then there is the body awareness of yoga, and the freedom to add your own personal flare.

My inhibitions flew out the window as everyone in the room followed Jolie in the first few steps. But unlike in an aerobics workout, you don't have to stare at the instructor and mimic. She gives you basic moves, and the rest is up to your body to decide. Nia dance class felt more like a party than a workout. We were all sweating, sure, but we were all smiling and getting lost in the music. The musical soundtrack was carefully chosen by Jolie, and it is therefore perfectly compatible with the workout itself, adding energy when the movements get larger and faster, adding a calmness as the workout winds down. Sometimes during the workout I caught people's eyes, and we were all just smiling, loving the movements of our own bodies and how we moved in relation to each other. I had no idea how much time had elapsed when the music started to slow.

At the end of the class we made our ways to the wooden floor for some restorative stretching, and Jolie told us all about Nia. Being a beginner never felt so comfortable, because Nia itself is still relatively new. Jolie told us that the philosophy behind Nia is "joy." Now this is a philosophy I can love and understand. And through the upward lifts of the body, the lightness of the feet and the surrender to music, I can see how Nia dance is based on the pursuit of joy whereas yoga is more centered on stillness and release. The combination of the two make for a content and joyful mind, and a beautiful, energetic, and ever-youthful body.

Beach Accessories

For all those baby boomers ready to head to the beach this summer: you may find yourself in a momentary time warp as you see flashbacks from the colorful days of the 60s showing up on Generation X and Y. They may wonder what all the fuss is about; well, guess what? The fashions of the 60s have come back even brighter and bolder than before, in all their color and glory.

Out in the Hamptons, the styles of the 60s can be seen on young people strolling through town, or at the beach. Bright pinks, shimmering greens, brilliant oranges and dramatic violets will come together to form some of the hottest colors of the season. They can be found on everything from brightly layered tees (worn two at a time) to string bikinis to your favorite beach towels and opaque tote bags. Walk into your nearest Gap store and the vibrant colors will nearly knock your socks off.

This summer the boldly designed flip-flops with bright stripes and surf motifs reminiscent of the Beach Boys era are really hot. Head down to the beach in a pair of these flip flops and you may be suddenly transformed into a surfer dude or dudette. Many surfer chicks will be sporting their fluorescent foam surfboards as they drop into a hot curl while wearing eye-catching psychedelic string bikinis. And just before covering up with a tie-dyed sari, they first have to dry off with their neon colored beach towels.

When you go from the sand to the street, you may change from your flip flops into your 60s inspired wedge heeled sandals. These boldly colored platform thongs will definitely get you noticed at the beach bar. Combined with your sporty floral print beach bag in chartreuse, coral, or turquoise blue, your transition from the beach to town will seem effortless.

Flower power in all its glory is back again in full swing. Palm trees and banana leaf patterns in loud colors can be found on men's Hawaiian shirts, beach shorts and beach towels as well as hats and flip flops. Polo shirts are bolder and brighter than ever before with primary colors in striped patterns. Fresh tropical prints from the islands are always in fashion and can be seen on shirts, shorts, and beach towels.

The styles of the 60s were reflected in the clothing of the era with motifs such as flowers and peace signs found on torn bell bottom jeans. Camouflage motifs have now made their way onto accessories in pinks and greens printed on everything from bikinis to shorts and hats. This summer Old Navy features many of these items.

Paisley patterns and prints that were popular in the 60s are now showing up in peach and pink short dresses, flared knee-length skirts, halter tops, and small clutch bags. And of course, white is always in season in the summer. The simple white dress, blouse, or Capri pants will soon take on a new dimension this summer when you add on your bright orange paisley belt, vivid blue scarf, hot pink shoes, or striped colorful beach bag. And don't forget your wide-brimmed straw hat, which can be purchased at J. Crew, to protect you from the sun and offset the striking colors of your other accessories.

And if the fashions don't convince you, all you need to do is turn on the radio and hear the sounds of Simon and Garfunkel from their 2004 tour or turn on the television and see The Dick Van Dyke Show Revisited to wonder what decade you're really in. The 60s are back again, or as the saying goes, "The more things change, the more they stay the same."

The beach will never look as colorful as it will this summer. So while you're sipping your pina colada, and watching the surfers cruise glassy waves, you might want to bring an extra pair of ultraviolet protective shades. They're not only essential in keeping out the hot rays of the strong sun but for protecting your eyes from those neon psychedelic colors that will be seen on nearly every beachgoer. From the bikinis; bags, hats, totes, and flip flops to the beach chairs, tents, umbrellas, surfboards and towels, your eyes may need a cool retreat on a hot summer's day. Bold and vibrant colors will be everywhere.

New Wave Workout

Spring is the time when winter shut-ins like myself step cautiously outside hoping not to be instantly seared by natural sunlight. For couch potatoes across the nation, this is the time when doomed New Year's resolutions to get in shape are sealed and forgotten. I mean, c'mon, why go to some far-away gym when you can sit back and watch the third season of American Idol? For most the choice is clear.

But for those uncommonly brave few who do manage to stand up from that comfy leather recliner and peer outside, the question is "now what?" Do you drive to the gym and struggle with those fantastically complex weight machines? Maybe you should put on those worn out Reeboks and run for awhile (read: two blocks). My fellow fitness seekers, I have the answer, and it is good.

You want to get in shape? Go surfing.

Don't stop reading now. Young or old, boy or girl, you can learn to surf. Though surfing may seem an unorthodox way to lose the fat and build both skeletal and cardiac muscle, think about it. As long as you're in the water looking for waves to ride, you're working your entire body. I mean, have you ever seen an overweight surfer? I think we're done here.

But where? How? With what? Surprisingly, picking up the sport isn't all that difficult. You don't even have to buy a 3-month membership. With the advent of "soft boards," (boards made of a lightweight foam that you couldn't hurt yourself with if you tried) surfing has become much safer than it used to be. Shawn Mett, owner of Island Surf, a surf shop with stores in Sag Harbor and Westhampton, advises the aspiring surfer to seek out surfing lessons rather than just diving in and hoping for the best. Lessons from a number of sources, including Island Surf, average around $100 an hour. After paying for a few surfing lessons and learning the basics, you've essentially bought a lifetime pass to the biggest gym anywhere.

After the lessons, wherein equipment is provided, you won't need much to keep going, just a wetsuit and a board. Typically, beginning surfers buy "long" boards, which are anywhere from eight to ten feet long and much easier to ride than "short" boards, which are used mostly by more experienced surfers.

East Enders wanting to start surfing are particularly lucky, as a number of the beaches along the eastern side of the island can produce waves of head height or higher. All of Montauk's southern shore is great for surfing, particularly Ditch Plains, which produces the most consistent waves and is great surfing for beginners and experts alike. For the biggest waves, head to Turtles, just beneath the Montauk Point lighthouse. Good waves aren't exclusive to just Montauk, however. beaches all along the Hamptons are good for surfing.

One assumption I made while researching this article was that surfing is a predominantly male sport. I pictured the typical surfer as a 20-something man. Not so, anymore. The commercialization of surfing and its recognition by the media as a big time sport in recent years have helped spawn movies like last year's Blue Crush as well as TV shows like MTV's Surfer Girls. In the same time frame that the media was warming up to surfing, and perhaps as a result of it, the number of female surfers has grown to equal that of male surfers. So surfing is just as viable a sport for women as it is for men. The other assumption I made, that surfing was a young person's sport, was also wrong (I'm on a streak). As it turns out, older surfers are among the most hardcore in the sport. It's not surprising for a 60-plus-year-old person to be the first person at the beaches in the morning.

Mett recommends learning to surf during the summer because there are fewer waves so it's safer and easier for a rookie. So put down this paper (maybe wait until you've finished reading it, then put it down) and get while the gettin's good.

Boat Detailing: Wax On, Wax Off

It's a clear bright morning on the East End. You rise and shine with the birds just in time to enjoy a bit of the cool crisp air, realizing that the afternoon will grow to be sweltering hot and humid. After a quick cup of coffee, it's time to venture into the heart of Sag Harbor. And as you walk down Main Street, any smidgen of frustration or ounce of morning irritability simply dissipates as you watch the town slowly come to life. Glancing toward the bridge, with the maritime lifestyle on all sides and the sun rising in the blue sky, you can't help but take a deep breath of the sea air and smile. It's that time.

You grab your supplies and head down the dock of Waterfront Marina. Waving hello to the dockmaster and dockhands, you press on down the dock, as you know today will be a long hard day not only filled with soap and suds, but also wax, compound, and some good-ol' elbow grease. You climb aboard a 30-foot sailboat, check out the salty topside situation and head down below. The owners just returned from a week-long trip to Newport, RI, so you know the boat will have to be thoroughly scrubbed. The overall situation could be worse, but the few chocolate handprints along the walls about a foot off the floor lead you to believe that there must've been a little rascal on board. You smile and Windex away the remnants of their good time.

When the interior of the boat is spick and span, it's time to get started on the exterior. You grab the hose, bucket, boat soap, sponge, scrub brush, chamois and pole, as well as any specific cleaners or waxes that the owners specified. You rinse, you lather, you scrub, you rinse. It's a very similar process to washing a car, and you've learned to maneuver on every boat with your eyes closed, as if it's your own. While making sure to use a hard brush on the non-skid and the softer one on the wax-coated areas, you make your way from the tip of the bow to the stern, portside and starboard.

While scrubbing the swim platform, you check out the dingy floating behind the boat. Apparently, a family of ducks must've taken the trip to Newport with the owners, as they seem to have had a picnic aboard their mini-yacht. After cleaning the duck damage, washing the hull, shammying the entire boat, and polishing the stainless, you leap back to the dock to admire your sparkling beauty.

The rest of the morning is spent detailing the other waterfront boats on your list. Then it's time to venture through town, drop off the linens at the laundromat and pick up some supplies at True Value for a transient boat in the Cove West. You climb aboard and realize that the boat will definitely need some extra tender loving care. As you are waxing on and waxing off, the cell phone rings. There's a new yacht that pulled into Waterfront for two days and desperately needs some help. Tomorrow's schedule is booked up for the entire day working on various boats in the Yacht Club and Marine Park, so it will have to happen later on this afternoon.

You approach the 125-foot "Burger," and you can already see the exhaust stains on the hull. The boat just finished its trip up from Florida a few hours ago, so it is to be expected that it would be filthy. The captain asks if you prefer to maneuver yourself down the hull in a harness or if you would rather use foot-long suction contraptions to sturdy yourself in the dingy and wash up from there. As the wind begins to pick up a bit, you feel that the suction cups would be a better bet. Floating beside the hull in your dingy, you align the suction cups and begin the scrubbing process. You manage to finish about half of the job when you feel water drops on your brow. You shrug it off thinking it's from the brush you were holding overhead, only to realize on your next stretch up toward the sky that the sky is no longer blue. Of course, it's raining, especially since the weatherman said it would be beautiful all day. You laugh, and it showers. You finish up the hull and get back on the dock. The cell phone rings.

"I was wondering if you could detail my..." You smile and say, "Sure! Thursday, 2 p.m., and call (914) 953-2449 if you have any other questions.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Magnificent, Southern Magnolia

When we designed the garden at Rock Cottage, our goal was to grow some of the more interesting plants and trees available to gardeners, including some with borderline success at tolerating East Hampton winters. The Southern magnolia (Magnolia grandiflora), one of the most beautiful, fragrant, and ancient of trees was top on our list of prospects. Our research and some extra care have paid off, and we have been lucky enough now to have one of these magnificent trees.

The Southern magnolia appears in many gardens south of Washington, DC. It is less common in East End gardens because the tree can be "iffy" to establish in Zone 6. This suggests that some diligence and caution in protecting the plant until established will pay off.

The tree can potentially reach a height of 70 feet or more, so is best suited as a specimen tree. It prefers full sun with protection from harsh winds. And while the tree tolerates partial shade, it will not bloom as profusely in lesser light conditions. Given that the tree requires adequate space, it is highly adaptable to a variety of soils. It does best in moist, well-drained, acidic soil. The tree tolerates high moisture and areas prone to wet/dry fluctuations.

The evergreen leaves and large, white, fragrant blossoms (they smell like a combination of lemon and vanilla) provide one of the most handsome, durable, and rewarding landscape plants. There is nothing more fragrant than a magnolia blossom on a warm night in May or June. The leaves are thick and leathery, and, while they remain green all year, the leaves drop on a continuing basis. For this reason, some feel the tree can be dirty and a nuisance. We have not found it so.

On the East End, it is best to plant the Southern magnolias in spring. This provides sufficient time for the tree to establish itself before winter. When purchasing a specimen, select one that is container grown if possible. Inspect the container to make sure roots cover the top area of the container (Southern magnolia produces many surface roots; these need to be healthy for success.) Also, check to make sure the roots have filled the container – this suggests the plant is vigorous.

To plant the tree, select a spot with adequate light and space, and dig a hole at least two times wider than, and as deep as, the container. Enrich the excavated soil with some peat moss to add acidity during the first season. Remove the tree from the container and position it so the top of the container roots are level with the soil surface. Backfill the hole with the enriched soil, and water the tree thoroughly to settle the soil. Then, apply about three inches of mulch to the soil surface to help conserve moisture and prevent weeds.

Most Southern magnolias go through a shock period after transplanting. It is not unusual for a newly planted tree to lose some leaves. During this period, make sure the tree is well-watered. You should see some new growth after about two months. Wait until the second season before fertilizing.

It takes three to four growing seasons to establish a Southern magnolia. The first summer and winter are the most critical. During both, it is important to keep the tree hydrated to offset stress. Be sure to apply a thick coating of mulch the first winter to protect the surface roots.

At Rock Cottage, we have to say the Southern magnolia is one of our favorite trees. Many friends who have seen the tree have now purchased and planted specimens. Perhaps the Southern magnolia may now establish its long-overdue addition to gardens on the East End!

Understanding Feng Shui

Feng Shui, translated literally from Chinese means "Wind & Water." We know it in the West as the Chinese Art of Placement. Originating in China more than 3,000 years ago, Feng Shui has gained widespread popularity in the United States and around the world. The objective of Feng Shui is to harmonize and balance your environment to support personal transformation, growth, and full potential in all areas of your life. We achieve this by observing the physical and psychological effects of architectural elements, furniture placement, color, light, flow of chi (life force energy), and predecessor energy (what happened to the family who lived there before you).

In Chinese tradition, Feng Shui is only one of the key factors affecting our lives. The life factors for success are fate or destiny, luck, accumulating good deeds and education. One form of Feng Shui is the Black Sect Tibetan Tantric Buddhist School or BTB Approach, drawn from Tibetan Buddhism, Taoism, Chinese folklore, astrology, ancient Chinese philosophies, and includes yi (loosely translated as a wish, a will, or an intention).

Feng Shui is not a religion, but a philosophy and way of life. Our environment is a mirror image of what is currently happening in our life. By changing the environment we may change those things that we want to attain in our life.

The movement of chi is the life force energy within all things in the universe. Human beings feel the presence of chi and its effects, even though they may not be aware of it. It is this energy that permits everything to exist around us, even ourselves. If the chi follows the wrong path, a person's life and fortune will do the same. Feng Shui looks at the quality of the flow of chi. Is it fast or slow? Is it clear or are there blockages? Does your house offer easy access? Is chi going in the front door and coming rushing out the back? This beneficial energy needs to flow naturally in our inner space and in the environment that surrounds us. In order to enjoy happiness and prosperity, we need to harmonize ourselves with this energy. The use of Feng Shui in a residential or business environment gives us the opportunity to avoid stagnation of vital energy in areas of interest in our lives.

The BTB Feng Shui Approach uses an energetic roadmap called the 'Ba-Gua' meaning eight sections or trigrams, an octagon-shaped form to direct space planning. There are eight different sections representing eight different aspirations in your life, plus the Tai-Chi or health area, which is the center, holding it all together. The different aspects are: Family, Wealth, Health, Helpful People/Travel, Children, Knowledge, Fame, Career and Marriage/Partnership. Overlaying this energetic map onto the floor plan of your property, house, room or office, one analyzes what is happening in each general area.

Maybe you would like to be in a relationship, but when we look at the area of Marriage/Partnership in your house it happens to be the place occupied by your dog and storage boxes, bursting with clutter. Symbolically, you have not left room in your life for a relationship. By adjusting the space on both a mundane level (moving the dog out, organizing the boxes) and Transcendental level (a Feng Shui cure), we can invite chi in to enliven the stagnant area and place a physical reminder of our intentions to find the right mate. The Feng Shui Practitioner uses mind, body and speech to empower each of the 'cures' or solutions, placed in a specific location, for a specific intention.

Feng Shui makes sense and is based on logic, intuition and scientific principles. No matter whether your furnishings are from Tiffany's or Crate and Barrel, decorated in Hamptons Style or Soho Zen, the ultimate objective of Feng Shui is to create a balanced and harmonious environment that is supportive and comfortable for the people to transform their wishes into reality.

Rub-A-Dub Hot Tub

I always thought hot tubs were for spa vacations, or deluxe health clubs. Then, this winter I was visiting friends in Vermont, and after a hard day of skiing (well, they did the hard skiing, I did the enthusiastic cheering) we settled into their six-person hot tub. At first I was reluctant to put on a swimsuit and venture out in the 20-degree night air. But after some enthusiastic coaxing from my friends, I agreed. And as I sat emerged in bubbly, hot water, with jets massaging my back, looking at the snow-capped mountains and the starry sky, I felt transformed from a would-be couch-potato to an invigorated devotee who could not wait to take another dip.

When I got home to Sag Harbor, I began to investigate putting in my own hot tub. While there are no mountains on the East End, there are plenty of cold nights in the winter and cool ones in the summer. First, I consulted with my real estate savvy friend Frank Rossi. "Nah," he said, "take the money and put it toward a pool. That really increases the value of your property. And when you put in the pool you can build in a hot tub." I considered this sage advise. I have owned my house for two years and have yet to put in a pool. I've been busy with new roofing and windows and less glamorous improvements.

I had to agree with Frank the pool/spa combination would increase the value of my house. But, I would only be able to use it in the summer months – a hot tub I could use all year. After windows and roofing I needed a bit of pampering.

I wanted my spa on the back deck just outside the sliding doors of my bedroom. I met with Tom Everett, of Harbor Spas and Sparkling Pools (631-725- 3983) in Sag Harbor (http://sparkling-pools.com). Tom had great design ideas about sinking the Nordic spa into my existing deck and it was fairly priced. The Nordic tub Tom offered is round and could fit four people.

After more research I met with Rory Henby of Just Spas (631-537-1882) in Bridgehampton. Rory deals exclusively and directly with a company called Gulf Coast Spas. Rory suggested The Cape Haze model from the company's cool-night series, which is specifically designed for colder climates. It too is a four-person spa, but the interior dimensions are larger than the Nordic, and it has a lounge built into the tub so I could recline.

I asked Rory if it would be too hot to use in the summer months. He assured me it wouldn't and that I could turn the temperature down as low as 75, and it would still have therapeutic value because the 31 powerful jets.

Before making my final decision I went on www.gulfcoastspas.com to look at the product. What really sold me was their 24/7 service. I could actually call a tech in the middle of the night if I had a problem.

My hot tub arrived in early April. It was a cold night (about 35 degrees) the first night I piled in with four friends. We had the temperature set at 102 degrees and we toasted the first soak with a round of champagne. When we came out we were giddy with warmth (okay, maybe champagne too), but I don't think I ever slept better.

Just last week when it was close to 80 degrees, I biked to Shelter Island, then stopped at Long Beach and stretched out on the sand. When I got back to my house I was sweaty and a little sore. Browsing through the arsenal of aromatherapy beads that I bought with the spa I chose eucalyptus and slipped the bead cylinder into the aromatherapy slot on the tub. I stepped into the tub that was set at 100 degrees, which did not feel too hot despite the outside temperature.

I looked up at the green, leafy trees and then out to the spot where I plan on putting that pool, which, by the way, will have its own built in hot tub, because who wants to go all the way back to the deck from the pool?

The Lamp Doc Makes House Calls

Last summer, we moved into a new house in East Hampton. My husband and I brought our favorite things from the loft, while I stored a few undecideds at my parents' house. Too many, if you ask my father, but that's a different story. The plan was to live among the chosen objects, thus making our new house instantly into a home, and figure out later what else we wanted of the things that we hadn't instinctually included at first. Three of the items I brought were lamps – beautiful, small, antique glass lamps that my mother gave me. One has a cream colored paper shade perforated to create a design, one has a silk shade, and one has cloth. They are unique and charming, and in spite of a recent change in my taste toward modern, streamlined and easier-to-dust objects, I love these lamps. Only they don't work.

Well, they work sometimes, if I tighten the bulb every few minutes, or push the plastic plug cover tighter over the metal prongs (scary) before plugging it into the wall. But they need to be fixed. Since I never knew where to go in the city, and never found the time to take them to be repaired, I assumed I would fare no better here, with the limited number of repair shops, and I put them in a box in the basement.

But I have a solution now, because I know about The Lamp Surgeon, Roy Schneit. He and his wife Lois, the Nurse, make house calls on the East End (and in all five boroughs, NJ, and CT) to heal ailing table lamps, floor lamps, wall sconces and the occasional chandelier, returning them to their brilliant glory and lighting up any homeowner's life. They can fix cracked plugs, frayed wires, loose connections and most other symptoms that are keeping you in the dark, on antique, halogen, modern or traditional fixtures.

Having previously owned lighting businesses in Manhattan, Schneit knew that most people abhorred the task of traveling in a cab with their heavy and often valuable lighting fixtures, dropping them off to be repaired over several weeks, and then picking them up again and bringing them home in, hopefully, one piece after traveling the mean streets of the city. And it's no more fun, driving yourself in the summertime traffic of the Hamptons. But he has solved this dilemma.

In fact, his simple and unique service brings on one of those "why didn't I think of that?" moments. You call him on his cell phone and describe the problem. He will give you a price quote, starting from $60, and you will set up an appointment for him and Lois to come to your house (often within 48 hours of the call) with a suitcase of tools and parts, and fix your lamps. There is no travel charge, and no service fee. You can pay with a check or in cash, and the work is guaranteed for one year. The house call is usually completed within one to two hours, and that's it. Your lamps work, and your home is, once again, brightly lit or moodily mellowed.

And you didn't have to go anywhere, or actually do anything. If you are already somewhere, at work or at the beach, you can arrange to leave a key, and the Schneits will go on with business as usual. Plus, they will provide references. If you need it, they can also bring light bulbs. The Lamp Surgeon wholesales unusual and hard-to-find bulbs to restaurants and other businesses, and they will sell you a carton too, for that fabulous lamp you just brought back from Italy.

If you are even more creative and want to create your own lamp from an object you found at a yard sale, or a cookie jar you never use, Schneit can handle that too. He will drill a hole and wire it up, if it lends itself to that – material and fragility come in to play. But give a call and ask. They are very accommodating, having built their business to provide ultimate convenience and service for their clients. They are already running to the East End on a regular basis, at the request of interior designers and builders who want to give their clients the best. Call Roy and Lois at 917-414-0426, between 9 a.m. and 10 p.m.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Anna Anisimova, a 19-year-old Russian/ heiress /socialite/ex-model, may now add real estate mogul to her long list of titles. She plunked down a record $550,000 to rent Denise Rich's plush 6-acre Southampton estate, "Swan's Way," for the summer.

Hampton Retreats, a specialized home rental service in Southampton had just expanded their horizons into the sales market. This unique service, which provides clients with not only a vacation home but with just about anything they might require, from a personal chef to a massage, is now in the business of selling homes as well. They have a 24-hour concierge service and offer all the amenities of a five star hotel. They will now be operating in Southampton as Dynamic Worldwide Properties and introducing their "wholesale brokerage" concept to the East End. They use an intensified marketing approach where on site sales people concentrate on one property at a time. In return for a reduced sales commission, the owner commits to an exclusive listing with the agency. CEO Brad Zackson and President Carolyn Schlam say that they will not only target the wealthy and discerning clients from New York and around the country, but aim for the European market as well. She says that the Euro-cash value will draw international buyers to Hampton's real estate. They also will reimburse clients the rental fee if the rental turns to a sale.

On the Market:

Goose Creek, Brian Bantry's 5 + acre estate on Georgica Pond, is still for sale. The 25,000 sq.-ft. home has 8 bedrooms and 16 baths, a roman bath, sauna, steam room, gym, and indoor lap pool. The estate has housed various celebrities over the years including Jennifer Lopez, who celebrated her 32nd birthday there and Geena Davis, who was married there. Madonna and Kevin Costner have also been tenants. It has a 100 seat screening room, a cross shaped outdoor pool, a 6 car garage and separate maid's quarters. You can walk to the ocean. It is listed with Prudential Douglas Elliman in Bridgehampton for 24 million.

Georgica Pond, East Hampton

The beautiful Burnt Point Estate on Georgica Pond has been on the market for a few months. The drive in to this very private estate in Wainscott is a half mile long. It runs along 2000 feet of shoreline and has its own private dock. The 18,000 sq ft house designed by Francis Fleetwood is positioned so that there are views from three directions. It is set on 25 acres, has 8 bedrooms and 10 baths, and fireplaces run throughout. The property has guest quarters, two barns, and a tennis court with a viewing pavilion, a greenhouse and a boathouse. There is an infinity edged gunite pool that has a whirlpool and waterfall. The elaborate estate home consists of 30 rooms spread through two connected wings. The basement houses a billiard room, gym and wine cellar. It also has its own power plant. It is priced at 50 million. Brown Harris Stevens is one of three area brokers working on the sale.

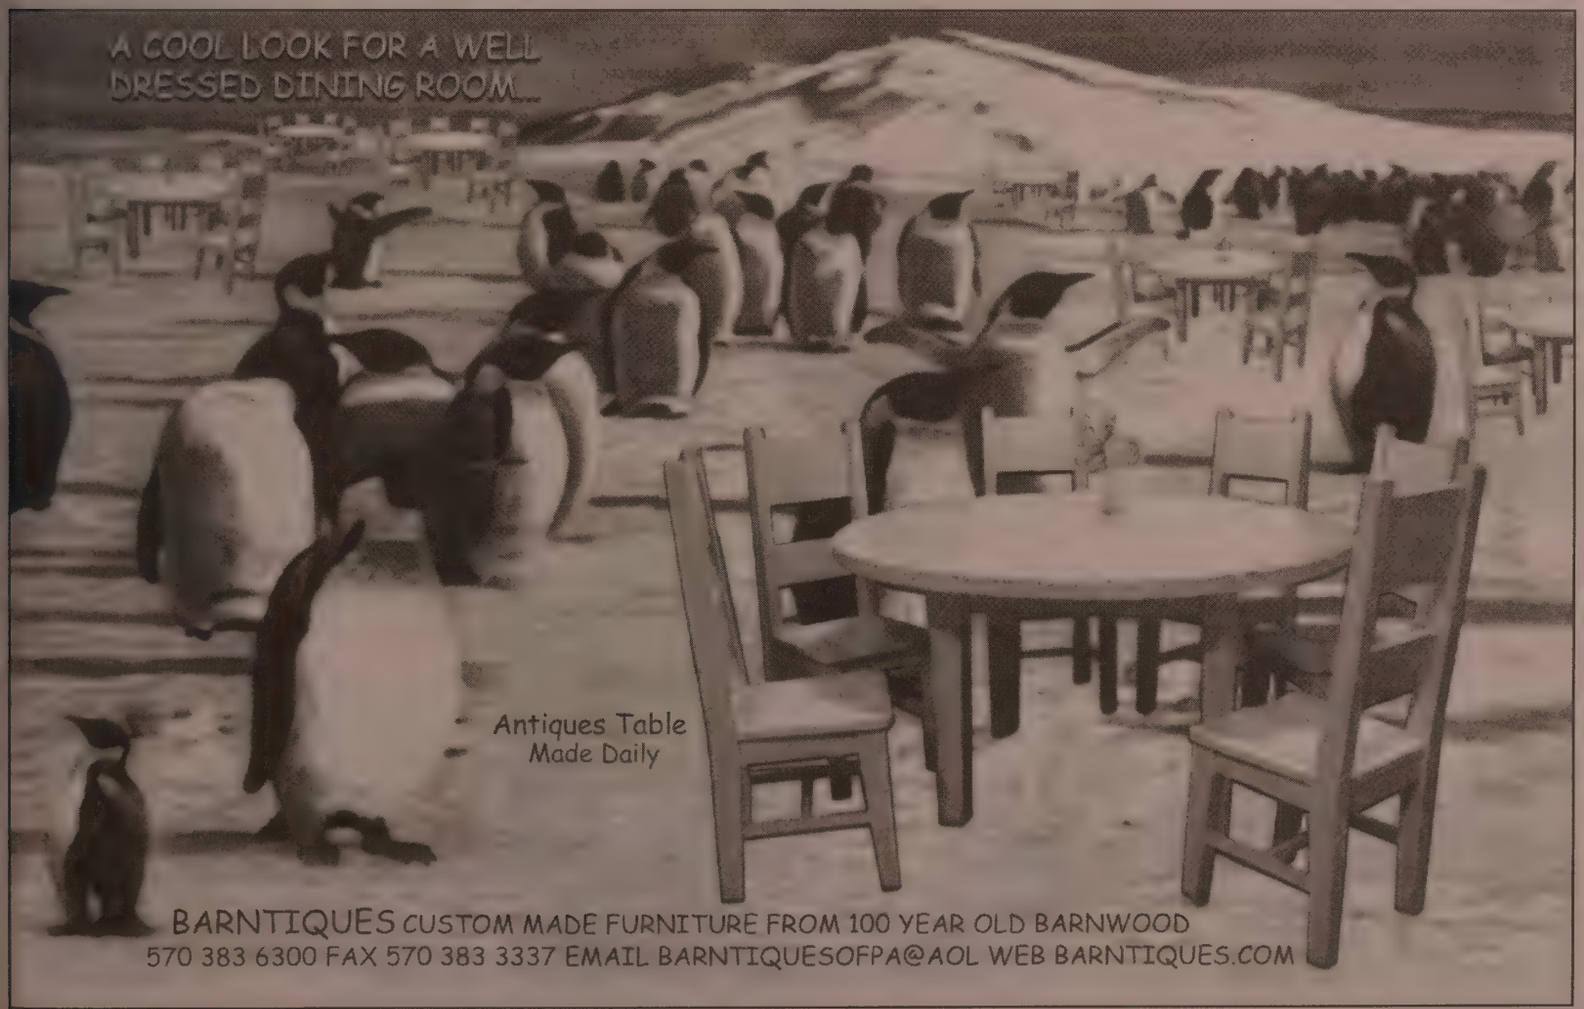

Rentals:

Christey Brinkley and Peter Cook closed on their new North Haven home just a few short months ago. It seems the couple has already decided to rent the house for the summer. The price to live in the home of this famous couple is $290,000 for the season. Lori Barbaria of Prudential Douglas Elliman, the listing agent for the home, who appeared just last week on the show Access Hollywood featuring celebrity homes, declined to offer any information on who the new tenants may be.

To get to The Further Lane Estate you drive through an alley of trees onto 14 acres that spread out to the ocean. There is a private path through the dunes that leads to the water. The main house has 6 bedrooms and 6 baths. There is a separate beach cottage. You can see and hear the ocean from most decks, porches and balconies surrounding. There is a pool and pool house. The cost for the season is $300,000. Allen M Schneider Associates.

Changes:

The historic manor home at Bayberry Land comes down. The demolition of the Southampton landmark began last week, marking the end of an era for yet another one of the East End's once stately mansions. The plan for the property is to build a private golf club there.

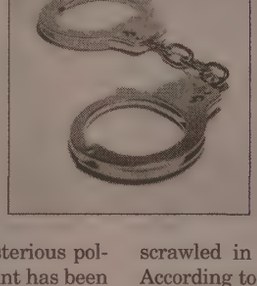

Police Blotter

Cookie Monster Scares Up Some Sweets. The Hayground Market in Bridgehampton was the scene of a snack attack. A thief with a sweet tooth made off with several pies, 50 bucks in cookies along with the same in cash. Police reportedly found entry marks on an office door.

Roll Over, Play Dead...Drunk. East Hampton Town Police responded to a call from a woman who discovered a supine stranger in her driveway. Picked up by police, the boozehound asked to be taken to another Springs address, where upon arrival he left the squad car and ambled into the woods and laid down. Placed back into custody, the besotted gent was taken to yet another address. Exiting the vehicle, he proceeded to impersonate a double line by standing still in the middle of the roadway refusing to move to the wayside. This last action netted him an arrest for disorderly conduct.

Teen Magazine Flees Mailbox. A Springs woman reported to police that her mailbox has been the victim of a mysterious poltergeist. Turns out some unknown assailant has been tampering with her mail, throwing it on the ground and even bending the red flag on the box's front door.

Ready to Rumble? According to Southampton Town Police reports, two men, both 21, were charged with first-degree gang assault along with two counts of first-degree burglary and fourth degree weapons possession after breaking into a home and assaulting the occupants. The records show that between six to eight men brandishing an ax and baseball bats entered an East Quogue home. Witnesses recounting details to police said the attackers entered the house through the back and front doors. Defending themselves in the attack, several household members sustained minor injuries; however two individuals were treated at local hospitals for cuts and abrasions. The incident is still being investigated and the Town Police Detective Division has asked anyone with information to call the Crime Hotline at 728-3454 or the department at 728-5000.

Tasmanian (Teen) Devil Demolishes Detention Trailer. According to police reports, someone entered the Hampton Bays Secondary School detention trailer, tossed around a garbage can, overturned a desk, knocked a computer to the floor, sprayed a fire extinguisher and made off with a $500 Motorola handheld radio.

Friend or Foe? Make that "Amigo o el Enemigo?" An East Hampton Village man found the words "amigo" scrawled in red magic marker on his car window. According to police reports, the vehicle was parked in front of his home at the time of the incident.

If You Can Read This, You're Probably Too...A Floridian woman found this out the hard way. Spied by police tailgating on East Hampton's Cedar Street in the wee hours resulted in her arrest. Given a field sobriety test, which she allegedly failed, the Sunshine State female was placed in custody and arraigned later that morning.

All Wet. East Hampton Village Police Chief Gerard Larsen told reporters that six East Hampton High School students unlawfully entered the backyard of a Pleasant Lane home. Two Bianchi bikes worth $1,500 each were taken, along with a trophy shark, which was later recovered in the pool. It appears the same group returned later that day for a dip because a neighbor, who heard a ruckus, called authorities. Arriving on the scene, police found the youths still in the pool. The teens who were accused of stealing the Italian two wheels were each charged with a felony – fourth-degree grand larceny, while the others were charged with criminal trespass in the third degree.

Can You Break Into Your Own Home? The story goes, if you can so can someone else. An East Hampton Town woman alleges that a thief's discovery of a hidden key may have been the ticket to her purloined $800 Dell laptop. Also stolen was a cell phone power cord. Police reports indicated no visible signs of entry.

Nature Nap Nets Snoozer Jail Time. A lone Lincoln peeking out from behind bushes on South Emerson Avenue in Montauk roused local curiosity. Upon closer inspection, authorities discovered a lost soul facedown in the grass. Asked whether or not he was driving the car in question and if it was his, the napper's affirmative response (along with his inability to stand on his own) landed him behind bars.

There Oughta Be A Law. The smell of (fresh) air was enough to cause an Apaquogue Road resident to report it to police. Apparently the offending aroma passing through the estate section was low tide in Georgica Cove.

TEE TIME
Dear Dan,

Like you, I am eagerly anticipating another U.S. Open Golf Championship at Shinnecock Hills. I enjoyed your article in last week's paper. The sentence in your article "No other golf course in the country has hosted the U.S. Open more times than Shinnecock" is, unfortunately, not correct.

Two courses have hosted the U.S. Open seven times, Oakmont Country Club in PA and Baltusrol Golf Club in NJ. In addition Oakmont Country Club is scheduled to host the 2007 U.S. Open which will be their record eighth Open.

None of this should lessen the excitement we all feel for having such a great & historic event in our community.

Kind Regards
Alastair Merrick
New York City
Via e-mail

Maybe they've had more, but Shinnecock is better.–D.R.

BUSHWHACK
Dear Dan,

In response to your article Sorry in your May 14 edition.

What are Mr. Bush's standards?

Are our young men he sent to Iraq to be murdered a failure in living up to his vision of what it means to be an American. Our young heroes lived and died having a standard of the highest honor that he can never live up to.

Where was this standard when Mr. Bush dodged the Vietnam War? When his father asked a General he knew to open up a line for our President in the National Guard. He never showed up for duty. He was campaigning for some senator in Alabama, while young men his age were being slaughtered. Where was his vision of what it means to be an American?

Are you now apologizing to Mr. Bush for all the mother's and fathers' who lost their sons and daughters in this terrible conflict in Iraq? It is proper that Mr. Bush should apologize to the American people for getting us into this horrible mess. This mistake he has made costs many innocent lives. Our country is in the largest debt ever. Our unemployment is high. Big businesses are moving out of our country. Gasoline and food prices are high. Our people are being duped and swallowed up in debt that our children will be paying for many years to come. Bush did not want this war to democratize Iraq. These people want to live the life they have been living for thousands of years under a religious rule. They have many young men if they were so unhappy, why didn't they do something about it. They do not want us to have any control in their country and they want us out. Our young me are dying every day in a war that was declared over in May 2003. Since then hundreds of our young men and women have been murdered. This mistake he has gotten us into will go on for many years. And if they decide to enact a draft, many more of our precious youth will die.

Problems in our country, such as high unemployment, seniors struggling to may for medicines that they need. Why is he sending fifty million dollars to Iraq and ignoring the needs of Americans. How can you defend a man such as this? He is the worst president this country has ever had. As the oversee-er of our country, he is a failure. Mr. Bush and his whole administration should be taken out.

Please, Mr. Rattiner, don't make apologies to Mr. Bush for any Americans. Especially for all the parents, grandparents, widows and children whose lives he has altered forever. Mr. Bush wanted this war, not Americans. Why is it every country hates us? We are known as aggressors, bullies and murderers. It's a shame for this nation that we have succumbed to that. It is because of inept leadership and stupid blunders. Mr. Bush has to apologize to all Americans.

E. Viola

CHARITABLE NOTICE
Dear Dan,

I was wondering how I can promote our charity event in Westhampton Beach Dunes this fall. I have a limited budget, but I have lots of great reasons people will want to know about this event. Thanks!

Bella Maré

WILLIAMS ISLAND

The Bella Maré stands tall in the premier waterfront community of Williams Island. The award-winning architecturally designed and landscaped grounds offer direct access to yachting, spas, tennis, fitness facilities and boasts luxurious amenities including concierge services, private breakfast club and lounge, surround sound theatre with tiered seating and a heated pool. These sky homes offer magnificent intracoastal and ocean views and are outfitted with high-quality designer appliances. Large closet space, whirlpool tubs, steam showers, custom cabinetry and marble-accentuated counter tops provide immeasurable comfort. This is the opportunity of a lifetime to own your private piece of the island.

LAS OLAS

RIVER HOUSE

The most anticipated Fort Lauderdale landmark is scheduled for completion this summer. Time is of the essence to purchase your castle in the sky. Towering above the Florida waterways, the 6th level pool deck provides breathtaking river views, while your terrace overlooks yachts below. Situated on Las Olas Boulevard, your private playground is one full city block of amenity rich living. Enjoy the sophistication and excitement of living at Las Olas River House with 24/7 restaurants, including Morton's Steakhouse, boutiques, valet, 10,000 sq. ft. private health club and spa, concierge, and a waterfront café with gourmet market and martini bar all within this 42-story landmark tower.

NMMA™ CERTIFIED

There has never been an inflatable kayak like our unique Sea Eagle PaddleSki. Because it is inflatable, it packs small, weighs little and can be taken almost anywhere there is water. Because it is a catamaran, it paddles faster and is far more stable than conventional canoes or kayaks. Because it can be outfitted with a variety of accessories, it can be paddled, rowed, fished, motored or sailed. Just 2 of 15 great inflatable boats. POISON IVY REMOVAL.COM®

We're Just "Itching" To Get Rid Of Your Poison Ivy.

1. WHAT CAN I DO TO RELIEVE THE ITCH?

There is no cure for the rash once it begins., only relief of the symptoms. Avoid further contact with the plant oils if possible. Once contact is made with the oil, immediately flush exposed parts with cold water and soap. Seek medical attention if rash persists more than 3 days.

2. DO THE BLISTERS CAUSE THE RASH TO SPREAD?

No. The blister are the body's natural allergic reaction to poisonous plants. IF the blisters break and ooze, the fluid does not contain the oils that cause spreading. Oils front the original contact with the plant will continue spreading (unless removed) for the first 1 or 2 days. If new areas of rash appear after 3 days, you are getting re-exposed to the plant oils, most likely from contaminated clothing, tools, or even cat or dog.

3. CAN I GET THE RASH FROM SOMEONE ELSE?

Generally speaking, no. Once the rash appears (i.e., within 1-3 days), the original oil has all bonded the the victim's skin, so it can't spread to others.

4. HOW LONG DO THE URUSHIOL OILS LAST?

OILS DO NOT EVAPORATE and can remain active for a year or longer after being picked up on tools, clothing, animal fur, etc.

5. I'VE NEVER GOTTEN THE RASH BEFORE. CAN I GET IT NOW?

Yes, you can begin getting the rash at any time during your life. Three out of four people are sensitive to poison oak and ivy. Sensitivity is just a matter of being exposed enough times until the body becomes allergic to the poison oils.

6.SHOULD I WRAP OR COVER THE RASH WITH BANDAGES?

Air is helpful to healing an wound. If you cover the rash with a sterile bandage, cover loosely to allow healing oxygen to reach the surface of the skin. It is important to keep the rash very clean; changing the sterile bandage frequently reduces the risk of infection. Seek medical attention if rash becomes red, feverish, or shows other signs of infection.

7. ARE DEAD PLANTS SAFE TO TOUCH?

No. The poison oils remain toxic and do not evaporate. All parts of the living or dead poison plant, including the roots, contain the urushiol oils. Be specially careful of dead vines on firewood and leafless vines in the winter.

8. DO I NEED TO CLEAN URUSHIOL OIL FROM CLOTHING AND TOOLS?

Yes. The poison oil will remain active on these articles and can case a rash months, or even years, later. Removal of the oil with a thorough cleansing is important to avoid contaminating unsuspecting victims in the future.

9. CAN I GET THE RASH FROM MY PETS?

Yes. Since the animals' fur protects their skin from the poison oil, they won't get a rash. However, the oil will remain on their fur and will contaminate you when you touch them. Removal of the poison oil from your pet with an effective cleanser will help avoid contaminating you and your family with an unwanted and unexpected rash.

THE BOLD LOOK OF KOHLER

ALLAN M. SCHNEIDER

REPRESENTING THE FINEST PROPERTIES IN

SOUTHAMPTON VILLAGE

Superlative example of what happens when masterful construction, generous room sizes, intelligent flow and a sensational landscape plan are combined with inspired interior design. This 3 year old masterpiece, sitting squarely in Southampton's estate area at the end of a long, gated drive, welcomes you into a 20 ft. high grand panelled entry across dark stained 8 inches wide antique hemlock floors that completely cover the elevator serviced 8,500 sq. ft. of living space.

The first floor with 10 ft. ceilings throughout, includes a 26 ft. by 31 ft. fireplaced great room with coffered ceilings, a 26 ft. by 21 ft. panelled library with fireplace, built in media and humidor and formal dining room. The kitchen, with complete butlers pantry, opens to its own morning room with fireplace. Staff quarters, laundry room, 2 powder rooms and a 3-car garage complete the first level.

The second floor, with 9 ft. ceilings, is reached by an extra wide staircase leading to the 1,600 sq. ft. master suite complete with his/hers baths, dressing rooms, sitting room with fireplace and private terrace overlooking the backyard. Separate, down a wide, gracious hall are 5 additonal en suite bedrooms that end with a back staircase going down to kitchen and finished basement.

The 3,500 sq. ft. finished basement includes recreation room, temperature controlled wine cellar, media room, additional staff quarters and another half bath. Outside broad covered porches and patios overlook the stunning landscape plan designed by Edmund D. Hollander that surrounds the 50 ft. Gunite pool with separate spa, pool house and Har-Tru court.
